Still Talking Beer.
To Mussolini by Air.
Trotzky Backs Us.
Regulating the Soil.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

THE SENATE and House disagree on the alcoholic content of beer and wine. The House says 3.2 per cent, the Senate 3.05 per cent. The difference is small.

A bottle of 3.2 per cent beer would contain less than half an ounce of alcohol.

Doctors say a child or an old man can safely, and in many cases profitably, absorb two ounces of alcohol a day properly diluted.

As for 3.2 or 3.05 per cent wine, there is "no such animal."

Mr. Orteig, learned French restaurant keeper, whose $25,000 prize enabled Col. Lindbergh to make his flight to France, says that mild red wines are 8 per cent alcohol, better wines 11 or 12 per cent, chateau yquem 14 per cent.

Wise French families drink natural wines diluted to less than two per cent alcohol.

French schoolboys drink a mixture called abondance, water with a slight red wine coloring, about one quarter of one per cent alcohol.

In ancient days, when men from the north came over the Alps into Italy, sometimes conquering, sometimes not, they climbed slowly through steep passes thousands of feet in the air.

Ramsay MacDonald, Prime Minister of England, on his way to discuss various matters with Mussolini, travels in a fashion that would surprise the old Germanic invaders, to whom he is related.

He will fly through the air, in a twin-motor seaplane, sitting next to Gen. Balbo, the great Italian flier who guided a whole fleet of airships in perfect formation across the Atlantic ocean. MacDonald will get out at Ostia, and drive to Rome, to be received by Mussolini.

Where Mussolini sits appears to be the head of the European table just now.

Trotzky, who once bossed Russia's army, and helped Lenin to throw out the czars, watches the world from Constantinople, alias Istanbul.

Trotzky has been here, knows his "capitalistic country," as Russians call it, and if he were a betting man he would bet on the United States.

He puts it thus:

"World capital will develop under the increasing hegemony of the United States, especially under the hegemony of the dollar over the British sterling."

Wise Trotzky. Hegemony means "leadership," and you will always find it located where great wealth is combined with engineering science and men willing to fight. We have those three things, be it said in all humility.

President Roosevelt doesn't call himself a prophet or a prophet's son and will offer his farm relief bill, with a promise to admit the fact instantly if it should prove a mistake. He wisely calls farm relief "a new and untried path."

It is hard to regulate production of men scattered all over the earth, competing without organization or agreement.

While Britain's House of Commons was discussing greater expenditures for fighting ships, a young woman scattered from the gallery reserved for members of the House of Lords pamphlets saying that war expenses were increased while appropriations for education, unemployment relief and housing were cut down. The pamphlet's last words were: "End this nonsense."

There is another side to the question. A country not adequately defended may lose its liberty, which is more important even than public housing and unemployment. When there are no wolves visible the sheep probably believe that shepherds and sheep dogs are a waste of money. They change their minds when the wolf appears.

Russia locked up six English business men in Moscow, accusing them of sabotage conspiracy against Russia's welfare, and Britain "expects a complete break with Russia."

However, Russia buys much machinery from Britain and gets credit from Britain, which puts trade first, and "petty annoyances" second. Britain will not allow any break with a good customer for last long.

Throngs at So. Boston Parade

SO. BOSTON CROWDED FOR PARADE

Mayor to Review Marching Throng in Holiday Event

Pictures on Page 8

South Boston was in gala attire today and had completed all preparations for its celebration of the 157th anniversary of the Evacuation of Boston by the British.

Throughout the district are displayed the national colors and those of the Irish Free State. The celebration will culminate this afternoon in the big parade in which 5000 will march and almost 200,000 are expected to watch from the streets of South Boston.

OPEN HOUSE RULE

The parade would ordinarily have been held yesterday, St. Patrick's Day, which the section celebrates jointly with Evacuation Day, instead it was postponed until today to enable many marchers to be free who would have been unable to leave work yesterday.

Combined with the parade will be the usual "open house" throughout South Boston. Visits will be interchanged by friends and relatives and the homes of the district will be flung open to add to the gaiety of the celebration.

Gov. Ely has planned to take part in the parade as usual but last night a slight illness caused his physician to order him to his Westfield home for the week-end for a rest. It was announced that the governor's condition was not serious and that he would be at his desk Monday.

MADDEN, PARADE HEAD

The parade will start promptly at 2 p. m. from Andrew sq. and will proceed to Dorchester st., to West Sixth st., to E st., to West Fourth st., to East Fourth st. and down to Farragut rd.

It proceeds along there to East Third st., to P st., to East Broadway to West Broadway to the finish at Dorchester ave.

Chief Marshal Joseph P. Madden is assisted in the parade by Lieut. Philip Doherty, chief of staff; William Kendrick, adjutant; Sergt. Michael Costello, liaison officer; Lieut. Edward Sheehy, aide-de-camp, and George Keegan, aide to chief marshal.

Mayor Curley and other distinguished guests will review the parade from a stand at B st. and West Broadway. The chief marshal and his staff will have their reviewing stand at SS. Peter and Paul's school, West Broadway. Gold Star Mothers will have a reviewing stand near that of Mayor Curley.

CHILDREN HONORED

The opening exercises of today's celebration will be at 11 a. m. today with commemorative activities in Thomas Park. State Senator Edward Carroll will be the principal speaker.

Yesterday's exercises were devoted mostly to the children of the district. In the evening more than 1000 members of the Charitable Irish Society and their friends attended the organization's banquet at the Copley-Plaza. Secretary of War George H. Dern was the principal speaker.

SMOKE OUSTS 19 IN SOMERVILLE

Nineteen persons, including a number of children, were driven from their homes early today by a fire in a two-story dwelling at 3 Charles st., Somerville, near the Charlestown line.

The fire, caused by careless smoking, according to Chief Hathaway, was confined to the kitchen and dining room and damage was slight.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick M. Ahearn, three children, John, 22; Edward, 19, and Mary, 15, and a nephew, Joseph McCarthy, 12, were asleep in the house when the fire started.

Mrs. Ahearn was aroused by smoke and awakened the others. They made their way to the street before fire apparatus reached the scene.

M'DONALD ON FLIGHT TO ROME

Momentous Parley for Peace Begins Today in Roman Palace

By ARNO DOSCH FLEUROT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Rome, March 18 (INS)—All paths of European diplomacy led toward Rome today as Prime Minister MacDonald, his daughter Ishbel and Foreign Minister Sir John Simon of Great Britain aped here for their history-making conference with Premier Moussolini.

The two British officials, bent on chartering a course for peace in Europe, reached Genoa at 10:40 a. m. after travelling all night from Geneva. They were delayed an hour owin to a defective fuse in the electric engine of their train, which forced a change to a steam engine.

Upon their arrival, the two Britons were met by Gen. Italo Balbo, Premier Mussolini's Minister of Air, who formally welcomed them on behalf of his government.

TO ROME BY PLANE

Under the eyes of huge crowd, Gen. Balbo then conducted the visitors, by motor car and launch, to the waiting airplane, which was to convey the entire party to Ostia airport, whence they were to proceed to Rome.

Guided by the Italian general, MacDonald and Sir John entered the plane, which took off immediately, soaring gracefully into the air.

The sea was calm for the take-off, and rain, which had threatened to make the flight unpleasant, cleared away, giving the British statesmen excellent weather for the air journey.

The official program here will begin with luncheon at the Palazzo Venezia, after which the conversations will be started. MacDonald's disarmament plan, which he laid before the conference at Geneva, will play an important part in the discussion.

VISIT POPE TOMORROW

Among other matters to be brought up are Italy's relations with Germany and France, friction between Germany and Poland, co-operating with the United States for maintenance of peace, Far Eastern affairs and the League of Nations, the world economic conference, currency stabilization and methods of dealing with debts owed the United States.

An elaborate program is planned here, although a luncheon planned for, tomorrow by the King and Queen probably will be cancelled because of the death of the King's cousin, Duke of the Abruzzi.

The Pope will grant an audience to MacDonald and Sir John tomorrow at the Vatican.

A state dinner will be held tonight at Signor Mussolini's Venezian palace in Rome.

DIVORCE FOR DOUG--JOAN IS BANNED

Both Stars Declare They Will Merely Live Their Lives Apart

Hollywood, March 18 (INS)—Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Joan Crawford, often cited as Hollywood's most happily married couple, have separated.

This repeatedly rumored and often-denied report was confirmed today by the famous film couple, but with an emphatic denial that a love theft suit filed against Fairbanks by Jorgen Dietz had anything to do with their separation.

Although there has been a separation, no divorce is in prospect, Miss Crawford and Fairbanks said.

Mr. Crawford said:

"Please make it clear that Douglas and I had planned to live our lives apart before this outrageous suit was filed. I know that Douglas is the victim of a plot and I am sure that he is innocent of the charges filed against him.

BRAVE THING TO DO

"The last thing in the world in my heart is to hurt my husband. I am seeking this separation because I know that we will be happier apart.

"We have discussed doing this for the past year.

"It is merely a case of two people being unable to get along together. It is the only brave thing for us to do. When two people are unable to get along the right thing to do is to part.

"I believe this the only means

The action definitely forced the problem before parliament and the government for the first time since the overthrow of the Herriot cabinet the morning before the due date.

The American crisis was given in the preamble as "a new fact" demanding a display of international solidarity as France's duty.

Nonchalantly stopping to adjust her gloves, Mrs. Jessie Burnett Costello, pretty 31-year-old widow of Fire Capt. William J. "What do I get for this, boys?" was her only query as she halted and the cameramen snapped away. (Boston American photo).

Extortionist Trapped in Plot on Aged Widow

Chicago, March 18 (INS)—Trapped by Evanston police in an alleged $50,000 extortion plot against Mrs. James A. Patten, widow of the multi-millionaire "wheat king," Axel Peterson, a handsome gardener today was under police guard.

Mrs. Patten, unnerved by a series of five threatening letters, was in a serious condition in her home in Evanston. For two weeks the 70-year-old widow's painful home has been under special guard.

A score of police and detectives were hidden about the Patten home last night at the hour appointed in the last threat letter for payment of the cash. The letter instructed the widow to meet the writer on Sixth street and pay $50,000.

Policewoman Vera Everett, garbed in Mrs. Patten's clothes and carrying a revolver and two dummy packages of money, left the widow's home as Peterson approached. Suspecting a trap, the 55-year-old gardener turned and went to his home three blocks away, where he was arrested.

Peterson admitted writing the letters, adding that he needed $8000 to save his home from foreclosure. After signing a confession he made an unsuccessful attempt to kill himself by slashing his wrists.

Widow Steps With Smile Into Cell

WIDOW HELD IN PEABODY CYANIDE MYSTERY

Taken, Smiling, to Jail on Charge of Slaying Fire Captain

Secret love for a young Peabody man and a $5000 insurance policy will be named as dual motives in the cyanide murder of Fire Capt. William J. Costello, it was learned today.

The motive was carefully kept secret by authorities after a charge of murder was placed against Mrs. Jessie Burnett Costello, the pretty 31-year-old widow of Costello and she was taken—smiling—to a cell in Salem jail.

Efforts to indict the young man and another Peabody man as accessories met with failure before the grand jury, it was learned, but both may yet be held as material witnesses.

The young widow, whose calm demeanor not only surprised but puzzled authorities at the jail, was kept under close watch of a matron during the night.

Mrs. Costello's arrest came exactly a month after her husband's body was found on the floor of his home in Fay ave., Peabody.

Children Told Mother Ill in Hospital

While the young widow faced her first full day in jail under cloud of a murder charge, relatives and friends of the late fire captain, knelt in prayer today at a month's mind mass in St. John's Church, Peabody.

She was awakened at 6 a. m. after sleeping soundly through the night.

With 10 other women prisoners she partook of the jail fare for breakfast and consumed the entire plate of cereal, bread and coffee that was handed her.

Chief Pierce and Andrew Fyfe, father of Mrs. Costello, advised the young widow against bidding her children farewell.

Fyfe appeared more affected by the arrest than any in the little group that enacted the drama in the little Fay ave. home.

"My God, this girl never did that," he repeated to Chief Pierce.

"It's an impossibility. She could not have done it."

Fyfe repeated several times the declaration of his daughter's innocence and then caught himself each time to mutter to Pierce:

"I know, Chief, you have a duty."

Chief Pierce found Mrs. Costello and her father at dinner. He waited for them to finish the meal before imparting the news of the indictment.

Face Blanched But She Remained Cool

"When I told her I had come to place her under arrest her face blanched somewhat but she remained cool," Pierce said afterward.

Medical reports by Dr. William Boos, Harvard toxicologist, Dr. J. Stewart Rooney, Boston toxicologist, and Dr. George Burgess Magrath, Boston pathologist, played a large part in the indictment, it was learned today.

Three young children of Mrs. Costello, Anna Marie, eight, Jessie B., six, and Robert, three, lived in blissful ignorance of their mother's predicament at the home of their

ROOSEVELT FARM RELIEF PLAN WELL RECEIVED

DICTATORSHIP FEAR ALLAYED IN CONGRESS

Wallace Gratified by Attitude Shown in Committees

Washington, March 18 (INS) — Roosevelt administration officials today expressed gratification over the reception accorded the emergency farm relief bill in Congress.

Although there was a strong sentiment to abandon the dizzy pace of the past week, it appeared probable that the farm bill would be brought before the House early next week and passed.

WALLACE GRATIFIED

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who would be given extraordinary power to enforce reduction of acreage to lift prices, appeared before both Senate and House Agricultural Committees.

"I was highly gratified with the fine spirit of co-operation expressed," he said. "It is the same spirit which has marked all of the conferences on this subject."

Dictatorial features of the bill aroused suspicion in the minds of many members, but Secretary Wallace told the House committee that most of these provisions were merely reserve power which would never be invoked.

IN HOUSE COMMITTEE

With Democratic leaders agreeing that the House shall act first on the bill, the House Agriculture Committee went into session early today in an effort to whip the bill into shape.

Bitter opposition from many representatives of big industrial centers on the ground that the bill would increase the cost of food was expected. The same opposition, however, failed to stop passage of the domestic allotment bill in the House.

Secretary Wallace admitted to members of the Senate committee that the processing tax probably would amount to $600,000,000 a year.

HOW CITIES WOULD BENEFIT

If, as expecter, the bill raises the buying power of the farmer, the big cities and industrial sections will benefit from increased employment, he added.

Objections were raised to provisions of the bill authorizing the secretary of agriculture to limit all agencies handling food in interstate commerce, extending even to the lowest middleman. This power, the secretary tol dthe House committee, probably would never me invoked.

The packers, millers and other handlers of food raised the same objection to the measure that they raised to the allotment bill. They would be forced to carry a tremendous load in financing their products until the processing tax is collected. It was to meet this objection that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was authorized to make loans to them.

Mass. Solons in Beer Fight

Washington, March 18 (AP)—Two Massachusetts representatives were appointed to the House conference committee which will thrash out with Senate conferees the alcoholic content of the beer to be legalized by Congress, while a third urged the House to stand by its position in favor of 3.2 per cent beer.

Representatives McCormack (D.) and Treadway (R.), the Bay State men named on the conference committee, both said they would attempt to persuade the Senate's representatives to accept the 3.2 per cent provision.

During the debate which preceded the House action in rejecting the Senate amendment, Representative Connery urged the House to insist on a beer bill legalizing 3.2 per cent alcohol.

Connery, wearing a huge green shamrock in observance of St. Patrick's Day, insisted the 3.2 per cent beer bill originally passed by the house was a temperance measure.

She is the "King Kong" Mystery Beauty whose picture is published on this same page.

Now then, how good is your memory for faces?

In the new thrill movie, "King Kong," which opens with a special Hollywood premiere on Friday night, March 24, at 11 o'clock, at the RKO-Keith Theater, Fay Wray is captured by a giant gorilla and later grescued.

The gorilla is caught and taken to New York in chains. One day the animal regnizes Fay Wray in a crowd, breaks his chains, seizes the girl, flees through the city and climbs to the top of the Empire State Building.

"King Kong" remembered Fay Wray's face. Can you remember the face of the girl here, the "King Kong" mystery beauty, and win $25?

The "King Kong" Mystery Beauty has several definite places to visit on Monday. She will call at some department store at Summer and Washington sts. If not "captured" there she will stroll across Boston Common.

Monday and every day next week she will visit other parts of the city. A daily reward of $25 is offered for her "capture." Read the Boston Evening American to get advance information of her activities.

Also be sure to read the rules carefully.

ELY CONDEMNS OBJECTORS TO RUM CONTROL

Governor Asserts They Are Seeking Only Personal Gain

Objections to his bill for state liquor control were blamed by Governor Ely today largely upon those who want the return of liquors for their own personal gain.

He warned that dry s in doubtful states will be quick to grasp at any internal strife that develops among the wets of Massachusetts and asked that this state set an example for control that will lead to eventual repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Arguments for nd against the governor's bill for liquor control will be aired at the State House Tuesday in a meeting that is expected to crowd Gardner Auditorium in its doors.

PROVISIONS OF BILL

In short, Ely's bill, which really is the report of a special committee headed by Bentley W. Warren, provides for a state commission through which all but malt beverages would be sold to the public.

The bill not only provides for the return of beer, now pending in Congress, but would also provide measures for handling other liquors that would return under repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"Objection is made that the Commonwealth becomes a liquor jobber," the governor said.

"Except as the Commonwealth profits, as it also benefits from other profits by reason of taxation under any form of control, the Commonwealth is not a liquor jobber.

GOOD LIQUOR GUARANTEE

"Instead, private capital sets up a wholesale business under government control, regulating the price, restricting the profits and insuring that good commodities are distributed.

"The intention of the law is to guarantee to the people good liquor at reasonable prices. Of course, it must be apparent to anyone that this provision is not satisfactory to those who desire to enter the business for personal gain."

Opposition to the State commission on the grounds that it would destroy local option came from Mayor Dwight R. Winter of Springfield, who said the manufacture and sale of beer should be subject to tax and regulations similar to those governing soft drinks.

LOCAL OPTION CLAUSE

On that score, Governor Ely said:

"The bill expressly provides for local option but it places the manufacture, transportation and sale of alcoholic beverages under the complete control of a state commission as to the methods to be used and eliminates local licensing boards with all the unsavory politics which attended the old order o things.

"In regard to local option, the bill already provides that a particular community is to be construed as for or against the sale of alcoholic beverages according to the position in which it found itself at the time of repeal, or a special election could be held to determine the stand of the community."

Ely added that the worst thing that could happen in this Commonwealth is for persons to set themselves either for or against the proposed measure. It would furnish an example to doubtful states of a bitter fight between those who espouse the wet cause, he said.

Air Exports Increase

Washington, March 18 (AP)—An increase in the number of civilian airplanes and airplane parts was reported by the Department of Commerce.

FIGHT FOR 3.05 BEER GAINS

Washington, March 18 (INS)—A serious controversy between House and Senate over the "kick" to be put in legalized beer and wine today delayed action on President Roosevelt's recommendation for modification of the Volstead Act.

The new beer bill was sent to conference for arbitration of the dispute over the percentage of alcohol to be legalized. The House held out for 3.20 per cent, by weight (4 per cent by volume), supported by the United States Brewers Association. The Senate demanded a limit of 3.05 per cent, by weight (3.81 per cent by volume), which was acceptable to such brewers as Adolphus Busch of New York and Anheuser-Busch of St. Louis.

With both House and Senate in recess until Monday, the conferees may meet informally to iron out their differences. If they do agree meanwhile, both House and Senate could act finally Monday. Prompt approval by the President would result in legal beer and wine by April 4.

Chevalier has been seen much in the company of Marlene Dietrich, glamorous German film star, and has been attentive to Lilian Harvey, famous European cinema star, since her arrival in Hollywood.

SECRET LOVE BARED AS MOTIVE IN POISON DEATH

mother's brother Andrew Fyfe, Jr. The children were told their mother was ill and had been taken to a hospital.

Word of the widow's arrest greatly affected her physician, Dr. Harris S. Pomeroy, of Peabody, who has been under care of doctors at J. B. Thomas Hospital for several weeks.

Dr. Pomeroy was questioned several times in regard to Costello's death but was relieved from further questioning when doctors forbade it.

According to Dr. Pomeroy's counsel, S. Howard Gardner, his client cried for several minutes and required sedatives to induce a quieter sleep.

Mrs. Costello Is Confident of Acquittal

Because of a visit of Mrs. Costello to the Peabody home recently before the death of the fire captain, the district attorney is to be one of the material witnesses at the trial of Mrs. Costello. Edward McMahon, young Peabody reserve policeman, is expected to be another. McMahon and his sister, Miss Catherine McMahon, were close friends of the Costello couple.

Atty. William G. Clark, counsel for Mrs. Costello, today asked Dist.-Atty. Hugh A. Cregg that arraignment of the young widow be postponed from Monday to Tuesday. He will ask a special plea before Judge Frederick W. Fosdick so that he may prepare arguments of alleged irregularities in the grand jury proceeding that ended in indictment, he told newspapermen. Cregg gave no immediate reply.

In her cell at Salem jail, Mrs. Costello expressed confidence in complete vindication.

"I'm innocent of this and I'll be vindicated," she told Mrs. Margaret Howe, jail matron.

Prison Officer George Patten who booked her at the jail, pronounced Mrs. Costello the calmest prisoner ever given into his custody in many years. There are 10 other women prisoners in custody there.

Jail records cited Police Chief Edward Pierce of Peabody, the arresting officer. Pierce, for many years a friend of Capt. and Mrs. Costello, was first to tell the widow she was indicted.

"It's all right, chief. I know you have to do your duty," was her cool reply.

A few minutes later she posed readily for news cameras. Since the death of her husband she had kept undercover in his home.

"You might have waited for that flash until I reached the step," she jokingly admonished one photographer. "It blinded me. I might have stumbled," she added.

"What Do I Get For This?" Widow's Query

"What do I get for this?" was another sally to the picture men.

"We'll send you some prints," called one.

"I've heard that ballyhoo before," she replied. "You guys never keep your promises."

Mrs. Costello left without bidding her children goodbye. They were playing in a nearby yard and were kept there until the mother's arrest was completed. They were told then that she had gone to a hospital.

Arrest records showed that Mrs. Costello was born at Yonkers, N. Y., but moved to Peabody when she was a small girl. She married Costello in January, 1923. At that time she was employed in a Lynn cereal shop and Costello was a private in the fire department.

She was widely known in Peabody welfare work and at one time was president of the American Legion auxiliary. She resigned after a "misunderstanding" and her mother, who died a year ago, resigned at the same time.

DR. HARRIS S. POMEROY, of Peabody questioned several times in connection with Costello's death, was said to be "visibly affected" by the word of Mrs. Costello's arrest. Dr. Pomeroy is in the hospital suffering from a heart attack.

of determining our future happiness. We will be able to learn whether it is best to continue to live apart or to kiss and make up and go back together again.

Reno is very ridiculous and if it comes to a point where it is necessary for me to establish residence in Reno I will do so without hesitation.

RUMORED FOR SI XMONTHS

"I will not wish to harm one other or to do anything that would cause one or the other discomfort. We concluded long before this that it would be the best thing to do."

The separation had been rumored for six months, but friends had hoped that a reconciliation would be effected.

The marriage of Miss Crawford, world famous film star, and Fairbanks, the son of Douglas Fairbanks, took place in New York June 3, 1929, after Fairbanks had paid ardent courtship to her.

Miss Crawford before her marriage was one of the most active of the younger set. She won numerous trophies at dance contests. She became a social matron when she married young Fairbanks.

She worked hard in pictures and attained tremendous success.

TO WOO HER AGAIN

Their beautiful home in West Los Angeles today was only a desolate reminder of the young man who smoked his pipe and read his books in the comfortable library.

Fairbanks said:

"I'm going to try mighty hard to win her back. I'm going to try to prove to hey that she is the only thing in the world that really counts for me."

He added he wanted "the world to know" that Miss Crawford had not deserted him when he was in actual trouble, and declared that they had separated long before the $50,000 alienation of affections suit was filed against him.

Fairbanks meanwhile was planning a vigorous defense against the alienation of affections suit which he continued to characterize as an "extortion plot."

U. AYMENTS TO DISABLED VETS IS STOPPED HERE

NEW RATINGS TO SET AWARDS IN FUTURE

Burial Allowance Only One Continued by Hines' Order

An echo of President Roosevelt's economy program sounded in Boston today when all but a few veteran allowances were ordered stopped here until further notice.

Loans on adjusted compensation certificates and burial allowances up to $107 were the only provisions that remained.

DISABILITY AWARDS OFF

Disability awards and allowances, hospitalization and other benefits were called off, however, in an order of Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of the Veterans' Bureau at Washington.

Every hospital, camp, home and branch bureau in New England was effected by the order. The order is in direct line with President Roosevelt's economy bill which gives him the power to cut veterans' benefits and allowances and stop awards where disability cannot be traced to actual war service.

Col. William J. Blake, regional director, was in Washington at a meeting of regional directors when the order was received here. Officials expect more detail to come from Col. Blake some time today. In his absence the order was read to the bureau staff and contact officers of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Red Cross and Disabled Veterans' Association by Harold E. Kiley, acting regional director.

ALL CASES TO BE REVIEWED

James P. Rose, commander of Massachusetts Department, American Legion, was one of many who called to make comment.

"Notwithstanding these most unusual events, the American Legion retains its balance and has full faith and credit in the conscience, honor and obligations of the United States," he said.

"In the Massachusetts sector of the American Legion the maxim has been adopted, 'Where warm, keep cool,' " he added.

The order was believed by officials here to be a forerunner for a general review of all veteran cases with new examinations.

STONE ADMITS $6000 OFFER

The hearing before the joint legislative judiciary committee on the petition to remove Judge Arthur P. Stone for alleged irregularities in handling the estate of Miss Ines Clarke of Cambridge will be resumed on Monday.

Before adjournment yesterday, Attorney Andrew Marshall completed direct examination of Judge Stone on Judge Colin C. Campbell's decree charging improper payments and misappropriations and took up the first accounting rendered by Judge Stone.

Representative Paul W. McDonald expects to start his cross-examination of the jurist later in the day and may launch his rebuttal on Tuesday. Judge Stone admitted yesterday that he had offered to pay back $6000 as a "compromise" in March, 1932.

BOY, 15, HELD AS EXTORTIONIST

New York, March 18 (US)—A 15-year-old boy, who thumbed through the pages of "Who's Who" to find potential victims, was under arrest today charged with attempting to extort $5000 from Prof. H. L. Hoskins, noted historian of Tufts University, in Massachusetts.

The prisoner, Irving E. Garfinkel of the Bronx, a student at Morris high school, also is accused of writing threatening letters to Mrs. William H. Horn, widow of the late president Lutheran pastor at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

Garfinkel was arrested when he appeared at the general delivery window of City Hall postoffice and asked:

"Have yo ugot a package for George Delman?"

Postoffice inspectors, who had been waiting several days for just such a question, stepped forward and seized the boy. Garfinkel said he wanted to obtain money to go int othe mail order business in Los Angeles.

Deportation of Normano Halted

WOMAN BEATEN BY THIEVES

Pawtucket, R. I., March 18—Two thieves, frustrated by Mrs. Bertha Davignon, 26, of Bloodgood st., in their attempt to steal $120 from her home, were being sought by police today.

Mrs. Davignon was beaten into unconsciousness and bound and gagged by the thieves but she succeeded in hiding the $120. She was lying in her bed when the pair entered her room. They commanded her to be quiet and then entered another room.

She arose and went to the place where the $120 was hidden. She concealed it in her bedclothing just before the pair re-entered her room. They attacked her and beat her but she refused to reveal the hiding place of the money.

Allen Painting Finally Okayed

The new portrait of former Governor Frank G. Allen, to be hung in the governor's gallery at the State House, has been accepted by the State art commission and will come up before the governor and executive council next Wednesday for approval.

The new portrait, which is in strong contrast to the one previously rejected by the commission, which depicted the former governor standing with his hands in his trousers pockets, is by John C. Johansen of New York and Stockbridge. It is on exhibition in the Boylston st. art galleries of Robert C. Vose.

GANG VERDICT DUE TODAY

The fates of Anthony Benebrowski, 22, and Thomas P. Dineen, charged with assault with intent to murder Special Officer Abdiel Mcdonald in the alleged headquarters of the tinsmith gang, will be made known today when a sealed verdict is opened by Judge Frederic R. Greenhalge.

The case was given to the jury at 4:30 p. m. yesterday by Judge Greenhalge after final arguments by Asst. Dist. Atty. William J. Sullivan and Atty. Joseph P. Walsh, defense counsel. The sealed verdict, which had been ordered by Judge Greenhalge in the event a decision was reached, was returned at 9 p. m.

The defendants yesterday denied they had dragged, struck or beaten McDonald. They also declared that Stephen Wallace, alias Gustin, and Frank J. Sullivan were not at the scene at the time the alleged assault took place. The two latter are also under indictment for the alleged assault.

Both testified that Thomas Curran, caretaker at the club, had an argument with Mcdonald, who they said, was intoxicated. They also said McDonald broke the piece and cross the street, they testified.

DIVER FAILS TO FIND BODIES

Once again today Muddy river was abandoned as a clue to the whereabouts of June Roldue, 8, and Helen Lindemann, 9, missing Roxbury girls.

Daniel McKinnon of East Providence, R. I., a volunteer diver, crawled along the muddy bottom on his hands and knees and announced he was convinced the bodies of the little girls were not there.

The latest search was witnessed by the heartbroken mothers of the two girls and the grandmother of the Roldue girl. More than 1000 curious also gathered.

McKinnon was forced to grope on his hands and knees to prevent his being engulfed in the soft bottom of the river. Today was the 25th since the girls disappeared from their homes in Prentiss st., Roxbury.

2 HURT, 1 HELD IN FIST FIGHT

A Roxbury man is under arrest, charged with assault and battery, and two other men are being treated at City Hospital for injuries sustained in a fight at Massachusetts and Huntington aves., Back Bay, early today.

Anthony Broderick, 26, of Minden st., Roxbury, will be arraigned in Roxbury Court today in connection with the case. He is charged with assault on John Love, 33, of Fairmont st., Roslindale and Joseph C. Simmons, 37, of Grove st., Wakefield.

AUTOIST FLEES IN BUS CRASH

Police are searching today for the driver of a sedan which forced the driver of a large bus to climb the sidewalk at King and Adams sts., Dorchester, narrowly escaping several police cruisers and snapping an electric light pole. The mishap caused the whole district to darkness.

None of the 15 passengers of the bus was injured, although Mrs. Margaret Horing Swadkerz, 34, Ouincy Hill rd., Stoughton was treated by a doctor. The driver of the bus, Harry Goldberg, Walnut pk., Roxbury, told police he said was directly in his path.

Foley's Blast Fails to Cost Witnessess Happy Berths

The five witnesses in the Solomon murder case will continue to live the life of Reilly at a Boston hotel just as long as police have reason to fear they may be put "on the spot" to prevent their testifying.

This was the answer of Police Supt. Michael Crowley to the verbal warfare between Police Commr. Hultman and Dist. Atty. Foley over the fact the witnesses had been lodged there since the killing and had already cost the city $2500.

His reply came in sequence to Commr. Hulman's declaration that the matter of keeping the witnesses at the hotel was for Supt. Crowley to decide.

Commr. Hultman's statement came last night after the assertion by Dist. Atty. Foley that he had nothing to do with playing Bonface to the witnesses. The invitation was conceived in the "generous brain" of Commr. Hultman, he said. He also stated that more criminals would be apprehended and trial of criminal cases would be speeded up if the commissioner would co-operate with other law enforcing departments.

And meanwhile from an eighth floor suite of the hotel where the witnesses are being maintained, come cries of "Hot dawg, boy, pass dat chicken." And the city beg pardon, the taxpayers, pay and pay.

ANGLO-RUSSIAN RUPTURE SEEN

London, March 18 (US)—Trade relations with Soviet Russia, strained by the arrest of six British engineers in Moscow a week ago, will probably be broken off shortly as the result of Foreign Commissar Litvinoff's official statement criticizing Britain for "pressing" to procure the release of the men, diplomatic circles said today.

At the same time, charges of "petty tyranny" were levelled at the Soviet. It was also said that discontinuance of diplomatic relations with the Soviet is but a matter of time. The British government's position has been fully explained to King George by Acting Premier Baldwin.

Litvinoff's statement, which accused Britain of trying to "remove" the prisoners from the jurisdiction of the Soviet because of the "ridiculous" sabotage and plotting charges against them, aroused ire in many British quarters.

2 DIE AS TRAIN CRASHES INTO MACHINE

Belmont Children Carried to Death by B. & M. Flier

Failure to note the approach of a speeding express train in her handling of the auto she was driving was believed today to have caused the almost instant death of Miss Margaret Rand, 17, and her cousin, Stuart C. Rand, Jr., 13, both of Belmont.

The pair driving home through a school cut, were almost instantly killed when the light car in which they were riding was struck by an express train at a private crossing shelf-mile from the Belmont station last night.

CARRIED 200 FEET

The car had almost crossed five sets of tracks at the private crossing at Alexander ave., when it was struck in the right rear end by the express, which was traveling at a speed of about 45 miles an hour. The boy's body was hurled from the machine but the girl was tangled in the wreckage and carried some 200 feet before the train came to a stop.

Investigation by police and officials of the B. & M. line revealed that L. J. Leighton, the engineer, failed to see the car until it was directly in front of him. The machine approached the crossing from the opposite side of the engine and was thus cut off from his view. A slight incline at the crossing also contributed to his failure to see the machine.

DAUGHTER OF STEEL MAN

Miss Rand was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rand and was a junior at Belmont high school. Her father is sales manager for the Kalman Steel Corp. She is also survived by two sisters.

Her cousin was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart C. Rand and was a pupil of the seventh grade at Belmont Hill school. He is also survived by a sister. His father is connected with the Boston law firm of Choate, Hall & Stewart.

ECONOMY PLAN FACES FIGHT IN HOUSE

Salary Slash for State Workers to Reach 15 Percent

Although a sharp battle looms in the House the first of next week on salary cuts ranging from 15 to 25 per cent for State employes and 10 per cent for legislators, the unanimous recommendation for the economy move by the ways and means committee is expected to be put through by a substantial majority.

The only class of employes exempted from the reductions is the State House women cleaners.

ALL TO TAKE SLASH

All other employes and officials receiving more than $3250 are affected by the 15 per cent reduction. Those under that salary will get the 10 per cent cut.

The reductions are scheduled to take effect April 1 of this year and remain in effect until April 1, 1935. In the case of the legislators the cut would be retroactive for the year 1933 and be also in effect in 1934.

In submitting their recommendations for the budget the committee reported a state tax of $16,000,000, an increase of $6,250,000 over last year.

TAX BURDEN LOWERED

Transfer of $10,000,000 to the cities and towns from the state highway fund for construction, safeguarding, reconstruction and maintenance of principal streets and highways, is provided for, which in effect, will reduce the net state tax burden of the municipalities to $6,000,000 as against $4,250,000 in 1932.

Rep. Albert Bigelow, House chairman of the committee, pointed out that in addition to the salary cut recommendations and the proposal to shift $10,000,000 of the highway fund to the cities and towns, an increase of $1,500,000 over the amount suggested by Gov. Ely.

Polo Hearing Ends as Prince Denies Mallet Assault

PICTURE ON PAGE 8

The famous $50,000 polo mallet assault suit of Arthur Mason of Hamilton against Frederick H. Prince, wealthy Boston banker, is computed and the findings of U. S. Atty. Frederick H. Tarr, who sat as auditor will be announced sometime before May 1.

Tarr's finding will be made in a report to the Essex superior court at Salem. He will report on the facts as he finds them and set the proper amount of damages, if any. If the report is satisfactory to both sides they will accept it. Otherwise they may bring action in the court itself before a judge and jury.

Taking of testimony ended yesterday with Prince himself the last witness. In denying Jove picked Mason with a polo mallet, as was alleged to have occurred in a game at Memphis Hunt Club in 1929.

Concluding his argument for Prince, Atty. James W. Sullivan contended that Mason and "those behind him" would never have started the action if they believed Prince would fight it in open court. He directed particular fire at the testimony of Dr. Thomas P. Burrage.

He asserted the exhibition, in which she struck a table in the courtroom a resounding blow with a polo mallet to illustrate the manner in which Mason was allegedly struck was "prearranged." He also asserted that the entire action against Prince was instigated by Quincy A. Shaw, who had long been at odds with the banker.

Atty. Samuel H. Batchelder opened his concluding argument for Mason by defending Shaw in the case. He declared the "impetuosity and temper" of Prince had been shown in the evidence.

SPOON AND POISON IN DEATH DRAMA

A spoon, a carton containing cyanide of potassium and another that contained oxalic acid, another deadly poison, are the prize exhibits of the state in the case against Mrs. Jessie Burnett Costello, wife of Fire Capt. Costello of Peabody, who, the state alleges, killed her husband. These exhibits, shown above, are closely guarded by state authorities as Mrs. Costello is held in Essex County Jail at Salem awaiting arraignment. She was arrested last night after being indicted by the grand jury. (Boston American photos.)

HOMESPUN COMEDY IS SCREEN HIT

Will Rogers and Pig Carry Off the Honors in 'State Fair,' Full of Honest Fun

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

In happy relief from the crime and gangster film which has become so common on the nation's far flung silver sheets, a bit of Will Rogers' homespun comedy flickered at the Metropolitan yesterday and put everybody in excellent humor. It was called "State Fair" and its chief motif was the evolution of a hog. Mr. Rogers may have been seen in more impressive sequences—but never more humanly. And good, honest fun never before romped so serenely through eight reels of what the engineers call feature production.

* * *

Mr. Rogers was hog-minded throughout the story—a farmer who staked his money and his breeding ability against all comers. It was rural drama without taint, although the honest hog raiser barely escaped bitter domestic complications when the family motored to the state fair to exhibit the prize beauty of the farm. While Rogers went in for hogs, his good wife dabbled in preserves, and by a judicious use of brandy in her mince-meat jockeyed the judges of the domestic exhibits into a spirit of scandalous gaiety and brought home a blue ribbon from the preserves section.

Will Rogers

As dramatic fare, even in photographic reproduction, "State Fair" was not lacking in its tantalizing complications. For there was the pretty daughter and rather stubborn son who accompanied Abel Franke (Mr Rogers) and his carefully nursed hog to the grand exhibit. Each of these children discovered romance in odd places—Margy (Janet Gaynor) on a roller coaster and Wayne (Norman Foster) at a side show. There was human appeal in the progress of these two youngsters and out of their adventures grew comedy that was genuine and snatches of stiff drama that rang true.

The real humors of the film, naturally, are concerned with Mr. Rogers and his pet porker. No child of the rich was ever more tenderly nursed. Even Mother Frake (Louise Dresser) arose in anger when she discovered that her husband had borrowed her silver mounted hair brush for service on the family pride—the prize winning Blue Boy. Mr. Rogers, of course, was just himself, whether on his own farm with his pet hog or in the state fair arena before stern judges.

On the stage was presented a collection of variety acts grouped under the general heading of "Spring Carnival." Joe and Jane McKenna were acrobatic dancers of more than ordinary merit; Jerome Mann proved himself a talented imitator of such radio stars as Ed Wynn, George Jessel, Ben Bernie and Walter Winchell; while Janet May cavorted merrily in high strung rings and upon lofty trapeze. As nearly as the thing could be accomplished with sets and props, Arthur Martel made short work of depression. He was heartily applauded.

The New Plays

COLONIAL—George M. Cohan in "Pigeons and People." Mr. Cohan is his own author and producer. The engagement is limited to one week. The comedy is typically Cohanesque; there is only one set and the plot, if there is one, is like a jigsaw puzzle. Included in the supporting cast are Walter Gilbert, Paul McGrath, Olive Reeves-Smith, Edward Nannery, Alice Altz, Eleanor Dudley and Jane Rathbun. Staged by Sam Forrest.

* * *

WILBUR—Ethel Barrymore in "An Amazing Career," a new play by Victor Wolfenstein and Sheridan Gibney. The story concerns the colorful happenings in the life of a prima donna. Included in the supporting cast are McKay Morris, Frederic Worlock, Sebastian Binagelli, Alfred Hesse, Josephine Hull and Geneve Dore Mendum. Settings by Robert Edmond Jones. Staged by E. M. Blyth. Produced by Miss Barrymore.

* * *

PLYMOUTH—Vittorio Podrecca's "The Piccoli." A show by puppets (marionettes), with six painted wooden actors, variety sketches and operettas, including "The Sleeping Beauty" and a selection from "The Gondoliers."

* * *

REPERTORY—Ted Shawn is a series of classic and modern dances. Besides Mr. Shawn's own company of artists the engagement will be augmented with dance numbers by Miriam Winslow, a local girl of acknowledged accomplishment. On Tuesday Mr. Shawn will present for the first time here his Ballet of Men.

Ethel Barrymore, starring in "An Amazing Career," her latest drama, opening at the Wilbur Monday.

Screen Star

Another stellar Big Eight bill is promised for the Scollay stage next week. Manager E. A. Vinson announces his headliner to be James Kirkwood, eminent stage and screen star. Kirkwood will be seen in a sketch, "The Extra Man," wherein he does a splendid dramatic job.

Other acts are of high rank. Bernie and Walker appear in a hokum, harmony comedy turn called Anything Can Happen. Another highlight will be "A Night in a Penthouse," a singing, dancing and musical offering as modern as the title suggests. The troupe call themselves the "Skylarkers." Eddie Stanley, well known locally, will be featured in a comedy sketch, "Just a Jester." Vernon Rathburn is back again. He is known as the "Prince of Rhythm," and will be seen in a revue featuring dancing. Young Rathburn has surrounded himself with Dorothy Gray, Una Lee and Del James. Tom Rathburn, father of Vernon, will also do a bit.

New Boston Stage Revue Above Average; Comedies on Screen

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

A strongly high-lighted vaudeville revue and a diverting sailor-boxing comedy on screen are the chief features of the new RKO Keith Boston show. But one must not omit a "short," loaded with laughs, a rollicking two-reeler with Clark & McCullough at their cinematic best. It is an entirely successful program, and one may place several of the variety turns in the headline class.

Sam Jack Kaufman very neatly introduces himself as the new master of ceremonies; he is a likable leader, and his few words at the start evoke a greater outburst of applause than the newcomer usually gets. The gentleman proves his mettle; not only has he personality, but he is a bangup builder of the bation, and the band, a work several times brought vociferous appreciation.

Jack Oakie

The revue is better than the average. Of its stars two are to be advanced as worthy of a place on any bill anywhere. One is Steve Evans and the other is Fred Lightner.

Imitations of Hollywood folk have been tried again and again. But none measures up to the kind Evans gets off. This chap is an odd mixture of comedian and contortionist.

Lightner is another able chip off that Lightner family tree, a comedian of the old school, genuine of time and stock of patter, song and dance.

There are still other good turns, and the Bostonettes dance with more than usual pep.

The feature film is "Sailor Be Good," the second jackfair film of the week to owe its entertainment value to stinking good direction. The praise now falls to James Cruze, who manages to make a pitiful story very amusing. Jack Oakie and Vivienne Osborne are starred, but the best actors are a couple of Gertrudes—Gertrude Michael and Gertrude Sutton. You probably never heard of them before, nor did we. But of Miss Michael particularly you will surely hear more, for she is distinctly a great "find."

Heinrich Gebhard Is Symphony Soloist

By MOSES SMITH

The fifth program in the symphony concerts of this week is divided between French composers and Wagner. In a year that marks a half-century since Wagner's death, and in a city which for the present is devoid of operas, Serge Koussevitzky assumes no doubt that occasional sparkling of the master's music-drama in concert programs will be well received. And he is right, for Wagner is still much alive in spirit.

The chosen excerpts are the "Forest Murmurs" from Siegfried, the prelude and Love-Death from Tristan and Isolde and the overture to Tannhauser. The preceding half of the concert included Vincent d'Indy's great symphony on a French Mountain Air and a suite in F major by Rousseau, composed especially for the Boston Symphony Orchestra and first played by that organization under Koussevitzky six years ago.

The d'Indy symphony was given a great performance at yesterday's matinee concert. The soloist was Heinrich Gebhard, local pianistic veteran. Apparently he and Dr. Koussevitzky had agreed on all essential points of interpretation, including the vital concept that this is no display piece for a pianist, the piano part being (though a most important and brilliant part) of the orchestral web.

The resulting presentation was rich and romantic and passionate. Dr. Koussevitzky conducted at white heat, and Mr. Gebhard and the orchestra were similarly warmed.

Rachmaninoff Tomorrow

Serge Rachmaninoff will give his second and last recital of the season here tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 at Symphony Hall. The great Russian pianist will present program, including two new arrangements by himself.

Hollywood's Most Lavish of Melodramas Is Featured

By HARRIS MORGAN

Upon two screens the most ornate of Hollywood's melodramas opened yesterday for its first showing at popular prices. "Rasputin and the Empress" boasts not only the three Barrymores, Ethel, John and Lionel, but production on the most lavish scale by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; and should prove a banner attraction for Loew's State and Orpheum.

This is the cinema version of the drama that lay in the lives of the Romanoffs. In capable hands the principal roles become exceedingly vibrant and vital. The Barrymores bring the characters to virtual life. John is a brilliant figure as the debonair Prince Chegodieff. Ethel Barrymore offers a stirring picture of the ill-fated empress. Lionel Barrymore, as the sinister Rasputin, was never more compelling.

Disinguished work is also done by Ralph Morgan, as the czar; Diana Wynyard, as Princess Natasha; Tad Alexander as the czarevitch; C. Henry Gordon and Edward Arnold.

Slightly fictionized, "Rasputin and the Empress" is a glance at the factors which plunged Russia into war and revolt. It is staged on a scale perhaps more lavish than anything heretofore attempted in talking pictures, with its great throne room sequence, the impressive and spectacular ceremony in the Kremlin, the huge review of the troops and other authentic reproductions of the glories that were St. Petersburg before it was swept by the

"The Red Mill" at the Copley. Second week. Most tuneful and dramatic of Victor Herbert's operettas. Star Sneaks Off to Europe With Husband After Finishing 'Lily Turner' for Warners

Los Angeles, March 18—Ruth Chatterton and George Brent sneaked off to Europe without telling a soul of their plans. That is, a soul outside of the heads of Warner Brothers.

Ruth had finished "Lily Turner" and her husband was supposed to start work opposite Kay Francis in "Mary Stevens, M. D." A little coaxing on the part of Mr. and Mrs. George Brent finally obtained George's release from that picture.

Lyle Talbot will replace the good looking husband of Miss Chatterton and, incidentally, this is young Mr. Talbot's biggest chance up to now. He has been playing second supporting roles, but according to Darryl Zanuck he is popular throughout the country.

Mr. Arliss Says Good-Bye

The movies next year will have to do without George Arliss. Mr. Arliss is departing for his beloved England as soon as he finishes "Voltaire," the middle of the month, and he isn't coming back. In other words, his contract with Warner Brothers has expired and there seems no indication on the part of either one to re-sign. If "The Adopted Father," which we understand is the best Arliss picture up to date, grosses an enormous business, Mr. Arliss may be prevailed upon to return to Hollywood. If it doesn't, I doubt if there will be a new contract. At any rate, he is going to take a rest in England.

Chatter in Hollywood

Wallace Beery is always turning up at the most unexpected times and places to do something kind. Leigh Crosby, of Lord & Thomas Advertising Co., writes to say that he was in Long Beach driving a relief ambulance for the Red Cross when one of the nurses told him Saturday morning, March 11, when the hospital was in a turmoil taking care of the injured, Wally Beery suddenly showed up at the door of the X-ray laboratory. He asked one of the nurses on duty to give him an apron and a broom and tell him anything he could ☛ and he'd help.

BOOKS---And a Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

IT is a salutary and hopeful sign in these times that the young men of the country are at last aroused to a sense of the dangers that confront us all.

James H. R. Cromwell has come forward with a spirited little book, which he calls "The Voice of Young America" (Scribner's). He is fractious in his contempt of the old demagogues, the ancient unworkable Constitution.

The blood of 1776 still flows in the veins of Young America, he says:

"We are not so fattened, mentally and physically, by one decade of unprecedented luxury that we will permit our destiny to be guided any longer by the outworn economic theories and broken-down political machinery of a materialistic past generation. Let us then survey the evils which beset America and our modern world and let us learn that there are obvious remedies by means of which we can throw off the yoke of depression as our virile forefathers threw off the yoke of oppression."

* * *

He wishes to know if business cycles and unemployment can be controlled, and if not, why not. He suggests control of money and credit, safeguarding the people's savings, encouraging thrift, and he intelligently considers the gold standard, inflation, unredeemable debts, men and machines, technical improvements and social progress.

Step by step he discusses reforms in all the various channels of government.

He wishes to see the immediate repeal of obsolete laws that still exist, the recodifying of our statutes and the clarification of conflicting judicial opinions. He speaks of the serious business of crime prevention, legal blackmail and the alimony racket.

* * *

In his preface he states that "those of us who are between the ages of 44 and 45 are going to bear the brunt of future calamities, and this book has, in consequence, been written primarily for my contemporaries. If, through reading it, even a few young Americans are moved to a fuller comprehension of the evils and errors which menace our country's safety and gain a deeper understanding of the infinite possibilities of practical reform my efforts will have been more than rewarded."

He wisely quotes James Russell Lowell:

"New times demand new measures and new men.
The old advances and in time outgrows
The laws that in our forefathers' day were best.
And doubtless after us some purer scheme will be
Shaped out by wiser men than we . . .
The time is ripe and rotten ripe for change,
Then let it come: I have no dread
Of what is called for by the instincts of mankind."

Living History Is Very Much Like Reading It

By GILBERT SELDES

GILBERT SELDES

As a rule the letters I get follow the main course of public interest, so that even if I did not read the papers I would know, a few days late, what was happening and what touched people. During the bank holiday, however, there were rumors that stamps might be used instead of currency, so my correspondents obviously began to be hoarders, and only those wrote me who had urgent reasons. These were largely personal and they interested me because in these days we have been living history—which is very much like reading history. You get only the big outlines: war, revolutions, changes of dynasty, usurpations and declarations of independence. The fact that human beings in the Middle Ages lived, had children and other joys and troubles, learned to read and write, discussed the serf question and speculated—that is hard to get from the ordinary history book. And it was equally hard to get from newspaper accounts of the past week. I do not mean that the "human interest" stories of the moratorium were scarce: but that millions of private events not connected with scrip and currency also took place—but found no place in the record.

* * *

For instance, a doctor wrote me that a grave injustice is being done to the color blind, and he says that he is one of the ten per cent who cannot see "green as green." To him "it is red, brown or blue, according to the shade." Why then, choose green of all colors for the go-light in traffic? He wants the light to be yellow. And through major crises in American history, through the suspension of his bank account, through proclamations and orders, even through a presidential demand for good beer this small, permanent irritation persists for him. He wants me to do something about it. As I cannot ask for support from Congress I do what I can — I mention his plight.

Betsy Ross Again

Mr. Edwin S. Parry, of Philadelphia, is a great-great-grandson of Betsy Ross and writes to inform me that my authorities on the subject of that lady's connection with the first American flag are all wrong. He grants me a decent attitude, "a spirit of inquiry and fair-mindedness," but he says that there is adequate historical proof that the flag was made by Betsy Ross at the instance of George Washington. The assertion that Washington was not even in Philadelphia when she is supposed to have made the flag is met by the argument that she made it in 1776, probably, although it was not accepted until a year later. In 1776, at the time indicated by Mrs. Ross, Washington was in the City of Brotherly Love. And so with all the other objections.

Mr. Parry says that his evidence is at least circumstantial and lawyers have called it credible. (The descendant has written a biography of his maligned ancestors.) And he adds that "the American people who treasure her memory, it seems to me, are entitled to fair play for Betsy Ross." I think he is right, especially as I've never made up my mind about the value of attacking an innocent story whether it be myth or not.

From the Depths

My last letter is signed "One of the Condemned" and it certainly is not unmoved by the tides of events. The point she makes is that a 50 per cent cut in the salary of a highly paid movie star is no doubt terribly mean, but it still may leave enough money to buy a pair of shoes; whereas a 50 per cent cut in the salary of minor studio workers means desperation. With pardonable partiality she says that the kitchen help "do all the work and supply the real brains." But she also says that her husband's stenographer gets about $20 a week and will be cut to $10, and she does not think that $10 a week for eight weeks will be enough to support a girl and an invalid sister. In all fairness, she adds, "I realize that there are many girls who haven't even that, but is this a time to add to that number?"

At the last minute the Hollywood cuts have been, according to reports, retroactive. They are on a sliding scale, like the income tax, and salaries below 50 dollars will not be touched. Yet the original scheme and the letter of protest bear thinking about because they touch every one of us.

* * *

It is a terrible pity that in order to keep solvent we have to economize just when we want most of all to encourage spending. Without a profound knowledge of economics, but after a long observation, I still cannot see how you can start business going by cutting away all but the bare minimum of wages. It is my guess that the economy program of our government is meant to be taken with the spending program—the half-billion (roughly) of savings is matched by a half-billion to be spent on public works; and that the new currency (even if it is not inflationary in any bad sense) will inflate—which, in practical terms, must mean higher wages—even for the kitchen help.

He wisely quotes James Russell Lowell:

"New times demand new measures and new men.
The old advances and in time outgrows
The laws that in our forefathers' day were best.
And doubtless after us some purer scheme will be
Shaped out by wiser men than we . . .
The time is ripe and rotten ripe for change,
Then let it come: I have no dread
Of what is called for by the instincts of mankind."

CLOTHES SCHOOL

By MARGARET MATSON

A TALL WOMAN SEEKS ADVICE. "I am 5 feet 9½ inches tall in my stocking feet, and feel about seven," she writes. "I have a big frame, weigh 155 pounds, but am trying to get rid of ten of them. My waistline is very high and makes my hips seem very broad. I wear a long foundation garment that fits my hips but will never fit my waist or bust. Belts or sashes seem to fit right in and make me 'hippy.' Will you tell me what will lessen my tallness but not make me look broader?"

Here is really a combination of two problems: A person who is too tall for comfort, and one whose hips are apparently out of proportion to her figure. Of the two, the latter seems the more important. None of us like to look "hippy," as she puts it. The first suggestion that we should make is that she adopt the advance style of the slightly lowered waistline—putting it, not up at normal as in the case with most dresses now, but allowing it to sit down about an inch or two above the hip bones. That will tend to obscure her own too-high and seemingly narrow waistline. Boleros, bodices that blouse a bit and are straight rather than fitted between the under-arm and the waistline are necessary to destroy the contrast between the width across her bustline and that across the hips. Fitted bodices, as you can readily see, emphasize that contrast and should be avoided. There is one word as to whether or not the shoulders in this case are narrow also. If they are, it would be well to add some width to the entire upper figure, thereby over-balancing the hips. This, too, is the manner in which one can lessen her height. A bright color from the waistline up and a dark color from the hips down is one way of broadening the upper figure and cutting height. Having draped fulness top around the neckline and shoulders and through the rib section is another way to broaden the upper figure. In every case the hips should be fitted snugly and always in the darker or less advancing color. Contrasting hat and scarf combinations should be good. Contrasting gloves, cuffs, or handbags might widen the hips. Contrasting belts which are worked into the design of the bodice, and are set sufficiently low to avoid their binding in at the waistline, can be worn if chosen carefully. Boleros, jaunty jackets, a cape, and the hip-bone, or two-thirds or three-quarter length coats or capes will help to lessen height without giving width to the hips. The jacket that ends on the widest part of the hips—or thighs, if these are large also—should be avoided.

As for undergarments, it is better for this type of figure not to attempt a one-piece foundation. There are some designed for the large-hip-with-small-bust type, but if even these are not quite right, it would be better to choose two pieces—a girdle and brassiere—and save the price of the one.

Another word of wisdom to the tall, large person should be that she be careful to have all her decorations—her trimmings, her color accents, and her accessories—in scale with her size. Here again, contrast emphasizes, so that if an accessory is too small, the largeness of the figure becomes too evident.

SPAGHETTI WITH PORK

3 pork chops
1 large onion
1 green pepper
1 pkg. spaghetti
1 cup cut celery
1 can tomatoes

Brown, roasting of your pork loins for Sunday dinner, or cut three thick chops for a pan dish on Monday.

On Monday, cut the meat from the bones and cut into inch squares. Stew this slowly in a little water and butter, then add to it what gravy you have left from your Sunday roast.

Next cut up one large onion and half green pepper, put into a frying pan containing drippings and add one cup celery cut in small pieces. Saute until brown and tender. Then add one No. 2 can tomatoes. Stew for half a minute and heat all thoroughly.

In the meantime put one package of spaghetti to cook into two quarts of boiling water (salted) and cook until tender. Drain into colander and thoroughly rinse in cold water. Add spaghetti to meat and vegetable mixture and simmer for 10 minutes. This is inexpensive, very appetizing, and satisfying.

The bones may be cooked in about one quart of water for three-quarters of an hour. Cut meat from bones, add one small sliced onion, two sliced carrots, a few slices of green pepper and two small diced potatoes. Season with salt, pepper, a little celery salt and a dash of nutmeg. Grooming

Beauty Error

IT IS A SERIOUS beauty error for the blonde to pencil her eyebrows with black crayon. Throws her face completely out of form through a black shadow on her eye lashes may prove flattering. Dark brown eyebrows are more congenial with cornsilk colored hair than that line of India ink, to which the light headed contingent is so devoted. Also, when browns and lashes carry pigment, it's best to avoid the eye shadows. Too much artifice.

THESE EXERCISES BRING GRACE AND CONTROLLED WEIGHT

Hours of Painstaking Practice to Train the Muscles for the Desired Results

By DOROTHY McLENNON

EXERCISES TO PRODUCE results must continue over a long period of time. It is true of musicians—whether one learns to play an instrument or to sing with the voice. Many hours of painstaking practice are required to prepare a violinist's muscles to play a concerto. A great singer studies and practices always.

So any one of us wishing to gain better control of his body must remember that regular daily exercise is needed to train the muscles so that they will produce the desired results—grace, health and controlled weight.

For grace the old inhibitions and restrictions in bodily expression must first be eliminated, and new, happy expressions substituted for them.

Through wholesome exercise the general health is improved, because respiration, circulation and elimination are quickened.

Exercise for Waist Muscles, Back, Abdomen

Stand with the weight equally divided between the two feet, the feet parallel and about 18 inches apart. Have the arms outstretched at shoulder height. KEEP THEM IN THIS POSITION THROUGHTOUT EACH OF THE EXERCISES, with the knees straight. Now begin.

Advice on Love

Don't Lock Up Girl of Eighteen

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 18, and at an earlier age most young people are allowed to go to parties and invite some of their friends to for an evening. It's different in my case. Often a girl or a boy has asked me out, or suggested calling, and I have to refuse the invitation, knowing that Mother and Dad wouldn't let me go, or have the friend come in. Why can't I have just a little freedom and happiness? A.

Dear A.: Such exacting rules for a girl 18 years of age seem a well-meant but mistaken policy to me. The pity of it is that parents feel, in locking a girl up and building a wall round her, they are excluding temptation. The most valuable aid to parents in bringing up children is to know their children's friends.

Dr. Copeland on Your Health

Try to Prevent Disease

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

TREMENDOUS STRIDES have been made in the treatment and relief of scarlet fever. But the number of sufferers from this dangerous disease continues to grow. I am sorry to say this increase is due to negligence and the lack of proper care of those children who have the disease.

Dr. Copeland

Scarlet fever is dangerous because of its serious complications. The kidney is often involved in this disease. Pneumonia may follow. Infections of the middle ear produce other dreaded complications. These complications can be prevented when scarlet fever serum is given to the sufferer. The serum is injected into the vein or muscle of the patient. It lessens the severity of the disease and in most instances prevents serious complications.

Within recent years a scarlet fever vaccine has been used as a preventive of scarlet fever. Though this vaccine is not entirely successful in all cases, its advocates regard it as of great value in the majority of instances. The vaccine is given to children who show a sensitivity to this disease. This is determined by the "Dick test." It closely resembles the "Schick test," which is used to determine a child's susceptibility to diphtheria.

Unfortunately, there are many persons who object to vaccination, serum injections and similar measures used to protest against disease. I cannot say too much as to the importance of vaccination and injections as a protection against smallpox and diphtheria and scarlet fever, as well.

Another grave source of danger of scarlet fever is the common negligence and carelessness in the care of children suffering from this disease. Too often the home remedies are relied upon in the treatment of scarlet fever. In many cases a physician is not called only after the damage has been done.

In addition to careful medical supervision, the child should be isolated from other children. The room in which he is quarantined from four to six weeks.

If you live in a community where diphtheria and scarlet fever are prevalent, take the necessary precautions for protection against these diseases. Consult with your doctor or the local health officials.

Etiquette

The Lady Takes Her Place on Right

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am aware that it is correct for the lady to seat herself upon her escort's right. If a couple are about to enter their theater seats from the left side of the aisle, does the lady precede the gentleman to her seat and immediately sit down? This would, of course, necessitate the man's passing in front of her in order to reach his own seat at the farthest end. Would not this be rather awkward for both concerned, especially if the lady is garbed in the prevailing lengthy evening mode? Or does she, upon reaching her seat, remain standing in front of it until her escort has passed in front of her to his? D.

If both the lady and the gentleman are punctilious about this social rule—and it is surprising how few people even know of its existence—the lady would remain standing as that she would be "the lady in front of the gentleman," and the gentleman would like to have her garbed in the prevailing lengthy evening mode? Or does she, upon reaching her seat, remain standing in front of it until her escort has passed in front of her to his? D.

If both the lady and the gentleman are punctilious about this social rule—and it is surprising how few people even know of its existence—the lady would remain standing as that she would be "the lady in front of the gentleman," and the gentleman would like to have her make it possible for him to have her on his right.

As you apparently know, this is an important rule in Europe, this rule of the "lady on the right of the gentleman," and when it is important to people in the country, it is very important. When one has always realized it, as you have, or has become conscious of it by being told or by observing, naturally one makes every effort even if sometimes not very convenient, to make it "come true." I know many men who are extremely uncomfortable if the women with them do not take thought about this rule and make it convenient and gracious for them to carry it out.

Daily True Story

Love Never Dies

In the "Symphony of Six Million" many discordant notes are struck, but when united they form the great living drama that makes up life in New York. To tell this story right we must start in 1914.

It begins when the world was at peace. Few of us thought of war or the curses that were to follow it. And our young hero on the East Side lived and thought as many of us—of love and marriage, a home and children.

And so Harold Bushman met Lilian Cort, courted her, asked for her hand, in due time made her to the preacher where they were married and went to Niagara Falls for their honeymoon. Travel was cheap and they prolonged their pleasure trip.

WAR CLOUDS

Meanwhile across the ocean statesmen and kings set the world aflame and the god Mars was rocking the whole of Europe in his cradle of iron, flame and blood. The happy pair returned to New York. Where Harold decided to begin taking of war. Harold was that, ahead and joined the army. Needless to say when war was declared he was among the first across the pond and among the first to "go over the top" for Uncle Sam and Old Glory.

At the front Harold lived the typical soldiers' life, and his great adventures were receiving letters from his wife and writing home. That enabled him to get his "blues" and spells of homesickness at the front he also learned that he had become father of a son.

Suddenly his letters from the front stopped. He was lost. Inquiries to Washington failed to bring any word. Wounded boys returning from the front told of seeing him wounded on the field of battle. Lilian was certain she was a war widow and decided to drown her sorrow by joining the Red Cross. Friends took care of her baby and she went to the front to minister to the wounded heroes, there she kept up a search for her "lost" husband. But the war ended and he returned to the states with no more word of her husband.

LOST IN BATTLE

To care for herself and her son she joined a hospital staff as a nurse in a small town a short distance from New York and settled down to live for her boy.

To return to our hero: For days he lay on the battlefield, given up for dead. English stretcher bearers finally picked him up after finding a spark of life in him, took him to the hospitals. In the shock he had forgotten his identity and his war tags were ripped off by the shell that hit him. He was "lost." His mind was blank and when he left the hospital all he knew was that he was an American. So he came back to the States and started his life anew.

He had a vague memory of being married, but could not recall where, when and to whom. So he laid it all to a prank of his mind. In due time he developed a business enterprise for himself, became rich and was almost convinced that his marriage was a delusion. He therefore decided that life alone was boring and found himself a mate. He set up a home in a New York suburb. The past was growing dimmer and dimmer and he was living in a present.

John Young, the former Harold Bushman, suddenly became aware that his memory was developed and he was rushed to a hospital. Doctors gave up hope.

But a miracle in the hospital saw that the doctors were to pessimistic and fought to save her patient's life, and due to the motherly care and attention his life was saved. As he regained his strength his memory returned also. The face of the nurse who had been instrumental in saving his life appeared very familiar to him. He plumbed the depths of his memory. Surely he knew her. But where, when and how? That was troubling him. For days he lay thinking. Suddenly it came to him. It was a flash. It was his first wife, his lost memory had returned. He was rushed to his room in kaleidescopic rapidity. He called the nurse to him. He looked into her face and the "home of her man" was willing to sacrifice and remain lost in her new identity. But the dramatic hospital reunion with her lost mate wiped everything aside. For the sake of their son she had to reclaim him.

Here was a man with two wives, two homes and two sets of children. What to be done? Stay with his second wife, or return to his first? But true love won. He secured an annulment of his marriage to the second woman, after making ample financial provisions for the "fancy." Then he returned to his first love.

All names of characters in this story are fictitious.

Eddie Is Killed by an Auto While Crossing Street; Sharlie Goes to Her Old Home

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Young and pretty Sharlie Dunn is attracted to irresponsible Eddie Wallis because he shows her a good time. One night Eddie takes Sharlie to his apartment and makes violent love to her. She flees in fear, and, returning home, interrupts a tete-a-tete between her mother and Carl Hansberry, a friend's husband. Next evening Jim Barnum, a neighbor, invites Sharlie to the theater. As they leave Eddie arrives and forbids Sharlie to go. Sharlie, unable to resist Eddie, goes with him. On the way home from a roadhouse, Eddie's car runs out of gas. He and Sharlie spend the night in the car. Next morning Mrs. Dunn says Eddie will have to marry Sharlie. They are married and Dodie makes Sharlie go to live at Eddie's home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

AFTER SUPPER Eddie washed the dishes and she wiped them.

"Eddie's mother saved up coupons out of oatmeal boxes and got that there set of dishes with 'em," Mr. Wallis told her from his seat on one corner of the rickety kitchen table.

Sharlie looked at them. They were white and there were pink-and-blue violets stamped upon them. She wondered if she would soon be saving coupons for a new set. Her face darkened at the thought. She could see herself growing old in this kitchen.

Once more she said to herself "I won't stay here!"

"Let's go to the movies," she suggested to Eddie when the last of the pans were put away and the dishcloth hung up over the faucets in the sink to dry.

Eddie looked at his watch.

"It's 9 o'clock," he said. "Wouldn't you rather unpack your hags and get settled? I'm tired, aren't you? . . . We didn't get much sleep last night sitting in the car . . ."

"I'm not all tired!" Sharlie interrupted sharply. "I'd like to get out for a while! Come along, Eddie, let's go!"

She ran into Eddie's bedroom, small as an animal's lair, and picked up her yellow hat from the bed.

The room was in some kind of order now. Eddie must have come in and straightened it up.

There was a clean towel on the dresser. Her bags were open on the floor. The bedspread had been pulled straight and smooth and the pillows had been "plumped up" and covered with clean, white cases.

Sharlie could not hear to think of coming back to that room that night . . .

In Darkness

In the darkness of the moving picture theater Eddie tried to find her hand and hold it. But she drew it away from him, wrapped in her own misery.

And when the show was over and they were driving home he tried to draw her close to him.

"Don't!" she said. "I don't want to be loved, Eddie! Please let me alone!"

He stared at her in astonishment.

"You've always been as keen as mustard for a bit of necking, Babe," he reminded her "I don't understand you now—"

"I don't understand myself," she broke in irritably. "I—I always liked you, Eddie. But I never thought I'd have to marry you . . . What are you stopping for?"

He had drawn the car up to the curbstone.

"I just want to get some cigarettes, that's all," he answered. He was getting out of the car as he spoke.

She saw him start across the black, wet pavement toward the brightly-lighted cigar store on the other side of the street.

Halfway across he turned his head for an instant. She knew that he was looking back at her . . . Then an automobile dashed past, hiding him from her for a second or two.

When it passed he was not there . . . Then she saw his body rolling over and over in the street. The car had run!

"EDDIE! EDDIE!" She never knew she screamed his name. It never knew how she got out of the car and across the wet asphalt to where he lay.

Eddie lay on his face on the pavement.

A man ran out to him from the other side of the street. He reached him before Sharlie did and carried him into the cigar store.

Sharlie followed him, sobbing under her breath.

"Here, telephone for an ambulance," she heard him say. His voice sounded faint and far away. The lights in the store seemed to turn purple as she looked at them —Then everything went dark.

Called a Cab

She never knew that she fainted. It seemed to her that she closed her eyes, and when she opened them again the little store was filled with people. She was sitting on a chair behind the counter.

Two men, all in white, were putting Eddie on a stretcher. She had a glimpse of his face. It was white as wax and his eyes were closed.

"Where are they taking him?" she asked the man who had brought him into the store.

"To Charity Hospital."

She got up from the chair where she was sitting.

"I've got to go, too," she said. "I'm his wife."

The man nodded. "I'll call a cab if you think you feel all right," he answered, looking at her doubtfully. "Sure you aren't feeling shaky."

"I'm all right, thanks. But don't call a cab. I have a car," she told him. "May I use your telephone?"

She telephoned Eddie's father and told him she would meet him at the hospital in 15 minutes. Then she went across the slippery wet street and climbed into Eddie's car.

It seemed to her as if she were driving through a dream that night. Nothing seemed real. Even the thick dark, substantial walls of Charity Hospital looked unreal to her when she drove up before them and stopped the car.

She was going up the steps to the front entrance when Eddie's father drove up in a taxicab. He had pulled a pair of trousers and a coat over his night shirt, and he was holding the collar together with one hand. He wore no hat.

"Where's Eddie?" he asked, his face working. "How hurt is he? Do Where have they put him?"

Sharlie shook her head helplessly. The building seemed to rock and so silent when they walked in.

A nurse was coming down the entrance hall. They asked her where they could find Eddie. They told Her what had happened to him.

—Half Whisper

"Just wait here a minute. I'll find out where he is," she told them in a half whisper, and vanished into a room behind a swinging white door. In a minute or two they could hear her talking over the house telephone.

Then she came back to them.

"If you'll go up to the second floor—" she murmured, waving them toward a staircase at the left of the hall.

Another nurse was waiting for them at the head of the stairs. She led them down a long, white, dimly-lighted corridor to a small white room furnished with a table and two straight chairs.

She left them there. They could hear the soft, slipping, clicking sound of her rubber-heeled shoes on the cork floor of the corridor. . . . Then there was silence.

And then, after a few minutes or so, the nurse came back with a doctor in a long white coat.

He was very grave, and what he had come there to say he said in a very few words. . . . Eddie had died on the way to the hospital.

"Dead?" Eddie's father began to shake all over. Tears rolled down his unshaved cheeks. "I've got to see him—I've got to see Eddie——"

The nurse and the doctor took him away down the corridor between them, and Sharlie was left alone in the room. She had no desire to see Eddie dead. She had a terrible fear that the twinkle for her had gone from his eyes, with his pink shirt and his checked cap that made him look like a young thug——

Rain Stopped

His car stood at the foot of the steps where she had left it.

She got in and drove it back to 17th st. The windows had stopped and the backyard was filled with moonlight just as it had been two nights before when she had driven into it with Eddie, only two nights before? Why, she had lived a whole lifetime since then!

It was only 12 o'clock when she reached the apartment building on Halstead st. The windows of her father's flat were dark.

But from the Hanaberrys' flat across the street came the sound of violent, syncopated music, and the open windows were bright with light. The Dunns were evidently spending the evening there.

She was very quiet about it. But she must have made a little noise. For just as she set foot in the living room Edna's voice called out from the dining room:

"Who's there? Is that you, Dodie?"

"No. It's Sharlie."

How does Dodie receive the news of Eddie's death? A tense situation develops in the next installment on Monday.

Graduate Athletes McGill's Veterans In Track Sports ↑↓ Maple Leafs' Loss George Is Assailed Life of a Champion

By JACK CONWAY

McGill will be represented by Phil Edwards, former intercollegiate half-mile champion, and Charley Drew, New England high jump and hurdles champion when at Amherst, in its track meet with Boston University at East Newton Street Armory tonight. Unlike our American universities, McGill permits students in its graduate schools to compete in college athletics. Edwards and Drew are included in this group.

Mr. Boston

The Canadian idea is a good one if athletes are not induced to take up additional courses just so they may remain in competition. If such practices were permitted in this country, coaches of the major football teams would try to have their star men take extra courses until they grew beards which would extend to their ankles.

American colleges of standing only permit students to compete in varsity sports for three years. One of the big advantages Army sports teams have over Harvard, Yale and Notre Dame in the matter of material is that they do not set up the bars in athletics against men who have played for three years on college teams before entering the service schools.

Track athletes find it difficult to retain their speed and jumping ability after they pass the college period. Youth is the greatest of assets in a track meet. In baseball, football, hockey and boxing, age and experience can often make youth look silly.

I shall drop in at the East Newton Street Armory tonight to see how members of the McGill graduate schools compare with the young men representing Boston University. Incidentally McGill has one of the leading medical schools in the world.

Ace Bailey's Injury Severe Blow to Maple Leafs

The Toronto Maple Leafs have suffered a heavy loss in the injury of Ace Bailey. The latter has a broken shoulder which will keep him out of the Stanley Cup series which opens next Saturday night. This mishap breaks up the famous Bailey-Blair-Gracie line. The success of any hockey team depends to a large measure upon its forward line. Bailey is a brilliant player, and always could be relied upon to do his best work at the critical moments of a contest.

There are only 10 National Hockey League games to be played. All of which proves that spring is only just around the corner. In fact Miss Spring steps into our midst next Tuesday. Let us give the young lady a great big hand.

Paris Apice Anxious to Meet Steve Halaiko Again

I have received a note from Phil Buccola, manager of Paris Apice. Phil writes as follows:

"I really thought Paris Apice won the fight with Steve Halaiko at the Arena. I believe Paris would do even better in a return bout. Don't you believe Apice is entitled to such a match?"

My answer, Phil, is YES! I thought the Apice-Halaiko bout was even going into the ninth round. What edge there was in the bout was in Apice's favor. Halaiko had the margin in the last two rounds. It was a fine bout, and had the crowd cheering as the rival boxers went to their corners at the end of the tenth round.

Ed Don George Hit by Athletic Commissions

Ed Don George has already found out there is a great deal of truth to the old adage which holds that the life of a title holder is not like that of the proverbial Riley. George has not been world's champion for two months, and yet has drawn the shell fire of the Rhode Island and Connecticut commissions.

George has been blasted by Eddie Foster of the Rhode Island commission and Tom Donahue of the Connecticut commission for his failure to sign for a return match with Nick Lutze. Mayor Curley, who does not pretend to know anything about the non-political form of wrestling, has also levelled his fire on George.

The wrestling fathers agree that Nick Lutze defeated George in their title bout here, and they insist that Don give the Californian another crack at his championship. On the surface it looks as if an organized group is out to force George into a return meeting with Lutze.

Don has his troubles now that he is in the big money. When he first won the wrestling championship from Gus Sonnenberg, he was on his way to make a cool million when he was knocked off by Strangler Lewis.

Al Silva Also to Appear on Argonne Club's Card

Eddie Mack's Argonne Club continues to make raids on the boxers who have been built up at recent "New Talent" shows at the Garden. Al Silva of Cambridge, one of the stars of the "New Talent" matches, has been signed to meet Joe Delmont of Roxbury in the eight-round semi-final to the Jose Santa-Babe Hunt match at the Arena on next Thursday night. Nap Proulx of Taunton, who made such a fine showing in his draw bout with Silva, will take on Charley Longo of this city in a six-round go. In the four-rounders, Pinto De Sa of Portugal will oppose Jerry LaMontagne of Manchester, N. H., Chester Lanier of Cambridge will clash with Terry Mitchell of Cambridge, while Johnny Hines of Roxbury will mingle with Alex Veradt of Taunton.

M'GILL-B. U. TRACK CLASH ON TONIGHT

The McGill University track squad arrived in Boston early this morning for its international meet with Boston University at the East Newton st. armory tonight. The games open at 7:45 o'clock.

Due to the co-operation of the Canadian Club and the Boston University Alumni, the meet is an assured success as the advance sale has already covered the cost and it appears as though the emergency loan fund for needy students will be helped considerably.

Coach Al Welch of B. U. is still undecided about several of his men. He feels that if his charges do well there is a chance that the relay will decide the meet. With this in mind, he may keep Ed Parthum, veteran 400 yarder, and Cliff Manning, hurdler and high jumper, out of everything but the relay.

The dash, the 300-yard run and the relay may decide the meet. If the Canadians come through with firsts in the dash and 300 it will cinch the affair for McGill before the relay. If the Terriers, however, win the latter events there will only be a few points separating them when the last event is called.

Realizing that a dual meet in itself might drag, a brilliant program has been arranged.

The military review will be an innovation at a track meet but will be a hit as both nations will be represented in the review and there will be over 300 Canadians present.

1—Military entrance.
2—45-yard time trials.
3—45-yard high hurdles.
4—One mile run.
5—Dash finals.
6—Shot put.
7—R. O. T. C. prize platoon drill.
8—300 yard run.
9—High jump.
10—Relays: Canadian Club vs. Intercolonial Club; Canadian Club midgets vs. Intercolonial midgets; Sons of Boston University faculty vs. Sons of alumni.
11—600 yard run.
12—Relays: West End House vs. Boston Y. M. H. A.; First Corps Cadets vs. 21st Infantry.
13—Two mile run.
14—Relays: Medical School vs. Law School vs. School of Education; Boston University alumni vs. Varsity B.
15—McGill relay team vs. Boston University relay team.

BILL CARR HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Philadelphia, March 18 (AP)—Bill Carr, record-breaking Olympic champion in the 400-meters run, suffered cuts in an automobile accident in Bala, a suburb, which may mean the end of his athletic career.

Lawson Robertson, coach of the Penn track team, said it "possibly means the end of the Arkansas flier's athletic career."

Robertson reported Carr was riding on the running board of an automobile driven by a classmate and that "another car came along and smashed into it, throwing Bill to the street."

Robertson was passing the scene of the crash a few minutes after the accident. Lifting Carr in his arms and carrying him to his own automobile, Robertson drove to the hospital.

POLO TWIN BILL ON AT ARMORY

The veteran 101st Field Artillery team with Brig.-Gen. Daniel Needham, newly appointed state commissioner of public safety in its lineup, faces the Westwood Club team in the feature match of the pony polo double-header at the Commonwealth Armory tonight.

In a junior league tilt the Harvard jayvees oppose the Battery A team. Tonight's program brings the indoor season to a close.

The Cavaliers have won the senior division with the Harvard varsity being runnerup, but third place is at stake in the Westwood-Artillery match.

A victory will give Westwood undisputed possession of third place while a victory for the Artillery will land it in a tie for the position with the 101th Cavalry.

In the junior league tilt a victory for the Crimson jayvees over the Battery outfit will land it in a tie with the Crimson freshmen for the championship and a playoff game will be necessary.

Advice to Hose Rookie Cost Chisox $40,000

By JOE CASHMAN

Sarasota, Fla., March 18—Gregory Mulleavy—there's a smart young fellow for you. He had enough sense to get out of hanking and enter baseball.

It happened just a few months before prosperity disappeared around that corner.

Gregory was working for one of Detroit's largest financial institutions and playing sempiro ball on the side, when he received the urge, or rather, the advice to step out and seek his fortune on the diamond.

GRABINER ADVISED BOY

Harry Grabiner, White Sox secretary, was the youth's counsellor. Grabiner did well for the player and not so well for himself, as will be discovered a few paragraphs later.

Said Harry to Gregory: "You're good enough to play ball in a lot of leagues. Why don't you get yourself a job?"

Said Gregory to Harry: "Pray tell where am I to get one?"

Said Harry, a little off in his Horace Greeley: "Go South, young man, go South. Down by the Piedmont or Sally Leagues you'll find plenty of openings."

Said Gregory: "O. K. I'll see you later."

Harry construed that last remark as a warning and taken an option on Greg, it would have saved him a lot of money. But he didn't.

Gregory, as a free agent, trekked southward and, sure enough, the first place he applied for a berth he was hired. It was with Raleigh in the Piedmond League, late in 1928.

By mid-season the following year he was the most coveted infielder in the lower minors and was involved in one of the game's dizziest transactions ever.

PLAYER SOLD THREE WAYS.

The Raleigh management needed money to meet the payroll. At least $15,000 was required. The sale of Mulleavy was the only hope and the highest offer for him was $5000. That was accepted and the deficit made up by accepting two other $5000 offers for him.

Yes, that's correct. He was sold to Toledo, the Yanks and the Tigers for $5000 from each and hustled away to Toledo with a promise of $1000 owed him, which he never received.

When the Yanks saw his name in the Toledo lineup, they ordered him to report to New York at once. He did so, explained the situation and was sent back.

Next the Tigers ordered him to Detroit. He went, repeated his story and returned to Toledo again.

Then the Yanks and Tigers appealed to Judge Landis. By this time the season was over. That winter, the judge decided in Toledo's favor. The big leaguers paid Raleigh for their money but there was no money to get.

FOR SALE—FOR $40,000

Gregory burned up the Association in '30 and the White Sox burned up the wires trying to buy him. At last a price of $40,000 was decided upon, but Grabiner was going to personally look over the player before he signed the check.

"Mulleavy, that name sounds familiar," he thought to himself. Greg's face was even more familiar.

"Where do you come from?" he asked.

"Detroit," replied Mulleavy.

"Aren't you the young man I told to go South?" he continued.

"Right you are," was the answer.

What Grabiner said then wouldn't look nice in print, but he paid.

Mulleavy was farmed out to Indianapolis in '31 and to Oakland last year. He was regarded as the best second baseman in the association, and the best shortstop on the Coast.

He's working out at both berths with the Sox. He doesn't care which he plays. He expects to perform regularly at one spot or the other, but if he has to warm the bench he'll do it in preference to returning to banking.

Among Syracuse's six finalists is Joe Moran, belting middleweight. Moran stole the show in the semi-finals. It was Moran's 36th knockout victory in 39 college bouts over the last three seasons.

BAM CONFERS WITH YANKS' HEAD TODAY IN ST. PETE

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 18—Babe Ruth's salary dispute with the Yankees probably will be ironed out today when the Bambino holds a weighty conference with Col. Jacob Ruppert here.

It was not certain whether Ruppert and Babe would meet at Huggins Field or at some other ceentral spot, but the report of the impending conference had the good folk here agog this a. m. For the signing of the Babe is one of St. Petersburg's annual highlights. No one wants to miss it.

Ruth has been holding out and though training with the Yanks has not taking part in any of the exhibition contests. This has affected the attendance at the games very seriously.

At the first game with the Braves a goodly number of the sun-kissed citizens of this city turned out at Waterfront Park. In the two games following with the Braves, though, the attendance dwindled.

This factor is likely to make Ruppert amenable to some kind of a pleasant settlement this day.

Ruth last year was paid $72,000 for his season's toil. This spring the Yankees bid an even $50,000 for his services. Babe admitted he would be willing to take $62,500.

But the Yanks' owner, Col. Ruppert, held firm, and lately the Babe has said he would take a paltry $55,000. A probable settlement today would be at $52,500. With Ruth and the Colonel each taking a $2,500 bow to the other before shaking and signing to the accompaniment of a machine-gun roar of clicking camera shutters.

Considerable sophomore strength, members of last year's freshman team, add support to the veteran material. A. O. Choate, J. S. Fitzpatrick, Don Gleason, Frank Jacoby, Bob Kiernan, J. M. Lockwood, C. S. Sargent and C. D. Woodruff are last year's frosh who survived the cuts.

RED SOX CLASH WITH PHILS

General Manager Eddie Collins has added a game to the Sox exhibition list. The Cincinnati Reds will visit Sarasota next Tuesday.

Dr. A. A. Woods, the Sox new trainer, is due in camp tomorrow. He trained the Yanks during the managerial term of the late Miller Huggins. Moe Gottlieb, who has been Sox trainer, will remain as assistant. Neither Eddie Collins nor Marty McManus had any fault to find with Woe's work, but they wanted a more experienced hand on the job.

Coleman Sent Home

Johnny Coleman, the Sox pet, is on his way home to New York. His mother wrote asking that he be sent back. The 17-year-old kid paid his own way down here but returned in style at the club's expense.

There were tears in his eyes when he left but he sent a wire from Tampa saying that he was satisfied he got home and thanking everybody for what they had done for him. A great kid, and a future diamond star if he grows bigger.

Ivy Andrews received a nasty wound in his right thumb when he was bitten while trying to break up a fight between his dog and another canine. He had the cut cleaned out immediately and took no injection of lockjaw serum.

Princeton Sends 4 Matmen to Finals

New York, March 18 (AP)—Lehigh's undefeated intercollegiate wrestling crown was in grave danger today.

The Pennsylvanians, pre-tournament favorites, qualified only three men for the finals, as against four for Princeton. Yale and Penn State each qualified three men, Pennsylvania two, and Cornell one.

Mangin Defends Net Crown Against Sutter Today

New York, March 18 (AP)—Cliff Sutter blasted his way into the final round of the national indoor tennis championships and today was due for an encounter with Gregory S. Mangin, defending titleholder.

Sutter reached the final round by defeating Frank Shields, 2—6, 2—6, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4.

Mangin, in the meantime, was flashing in whipping Sidney Wood, 9—11, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4.

The doubles final was to bring together Sutter and Dr. Eugene McAuliff and Dr. Lawrence Korrick and John B. Pittman of New York.

Bill Klem Admits He Never Was Wrong Is Starting 29th Season as N. L. Ump.

By BILL CORUM

Miami Beach, Fla., March 18 (US)—His mother called him Willie, his father called him Bill, his wife calls him William, and what the ball players and fans have called him from time to time couldn't be printed in this newspaper.

His square monicker is William Klem, but by any other name he would be as sweet an umpire. One of the best, that's Bill. He admits it.

He goes further, he says he is a man who was never wrong.

"I never called one wrong in my life," he tells you, "and I've been looking at 'em for more than 30 years."

There are those who might dispute Bill's claim to infallibility. There are those who have, and in all languages, including chaste profanity. I think offhand of John McGraw. For more than 25 years John and William were on the National League together, and never were they what you would call boon companions.

McGRAW BAITED KLEM

A baiter of umpires by instinct and long practice, John always saved his sharpest, most sarcastic shafts for Klem.

Thus when we saw Bill with his nose pressed against the fence near the finish line at Tropical Park, we couldn't resist the temptation to point him out to McGraw and ask him if he thought Klem could split out the winner from that point of vantage.

"Probably not," replied John, "unless the horse is 20 lengths in front."

That McGraw is just like an elephant—never forgets and never forgives.

Just the same, William keeps right on peering from behind an iron mask in National League ball games, and if some time in the dead of night you should creep upon a ball player at a lonely crossroads of the world and ask him whom he considered the best ball and strike umpire of all, he probably would lean over and whisper in your ear, "Bill Klem."

KLEM 29 YEARS IN N. L.

Klem, at present assigned to the Brooklyn Robins as their grapefruit league arbiter, is beginning his 29th season in the National League.

I know that in my own early recollections of McGraw's Giants and Fred Clarke's Pirates and Miller Huggins' Cardinals I recall the familiar figure of William, and that little theatrical touch he gives to his work.

That, it seems to me, helps make Klem a great umpire—that bit of color he brings to every game he works.

He adds just the proper bit of stage business to make the play dramatic. His calling of a close one heightens the effect without diverting the attention of the fans.

Klem insists that the runner always is actually out or actually safe, and that no play is so close but what an experienced and properly placed arbiter can tell which he is.

On this belief Klem bases his claim of infallibility.

As for the fans they are not only too far away but also partisan. Thus, says Bill, the umpire is always right. He is the umpire. Therefore, he is always right.

It's logical, at that, isn't it? But I still don't believe it. They may be right most of the time, but when they call one against my team they are wrong. Which is when umpires become blind, cuckoo and full of larceny. The rest of the time they are not bad fellows.

Simmons' Injured Hands Fails to Mend

Pasadena, Cal., March 18 (AP)—The only fretful item in the White Sox camp today has to do with Al Simmons. Al's right hand was injured in a golf game last fall and is not entirely O. K.

Fighting to regain possession of first place in the Canadian-American League, Manager Billy Coutu's Rhode Island Reds fly at George Boucher's Bruin Cubs tonight at the Boston Garden.

For weeks, the Reds have been fighting tooth and nail with the Philadelphia Arrows for the leadership of the Dooley loop. The Providence and Philadelphia teams are the class of the league with the edge slightly in favor of the Rhode Islanders, due to their better morale.

The Bruin Cubs and the Rhode Island Reds were both on the losing end of games with the New Haven Eagles recently.

After their most sustained drive of the season, the Cubs were set back by the Eagles in their last start.

REDS AT FULL STRENGTH

Since their last appearance at the Garden, the Reds returned to their strength. They were a badly crippled outfit on their previous visit but still parked enough talent to take the Cubs over the jumps.

Despite the numerous raids on his club by Les Canadiens, Manager Coutu has held his charges well up in the race. Although it is Coutu's initial season as a manager, he has met with overall success and has qualified for a chance at the big time.

Manager Boucher will start Bornheister, Cook and Saunders on the forward line, with Lane and Joe Jerwa on the outer defense and Percy Jackson in goal. The Cubs' first assists will be opposed by the Leo Murray-Leo Gaudreault-Gus Rivers line with Ab Gaudreault and Sparky Vail on defense and Paddy Byrne in the nets.

O'NEIL ON SECOND LINE

On the first change, Boucher will send in Donnie Weir, Peggy O'Neil and Vernon Buckles, who will relief Bob Taylor, Art Alexandre and Paul Raymond. Pinkie Davie and Frank Warshawski will be the defense spares for Boston and Jack McVicar and Roy Hinspeger will act as relief for Percy Jackson.

As the result of the Bruins-Canadiens game in Montreal will be announced at regular intervals, hundreds of fans will trek to the Garden to kill two birds with one stone.

Washburn-Martin Go Referee Sought

Finding a referee for his feature bout at the Arena next Wednesday night, Gentleman Jack Washburn, Yul Martin, is quite a problem for Promoter Steve McPherson.

Washburn, 227 pounds, and Martin, four feet, and Martin, 230 pounds and six feet two, will meet in a three-falls match. Jack Curley, capable official is needed.

McPherson has Johnny Al Pierotti, but Martin objects strongly to Al. McPherson hopes to sign a referee today.

The championship of the Associated Y. M. H. A. of New England is at stake tonight when the Boston Y. M. H. A., defending champion, takes on the powerful Springfield Y. M. H. A. at the Seaver st. gymnasium in Roxbury.

Springfield qualified for the titular round by disposing of the Brockton and Worcester Y. M. H. A. teams.

The winner will wear the New England Y. M. H. A. crown and represent the New England states in the National Y. M. H. A. basketball tournament on April 3 and 4.

Action will start at 7:45 p. m. with a preliminary game between the Boston Y. M. H. A. Jayvees and the Greenwood Community Center.

DUNDEE DRAWS WITH JEBY

New York, March 18 (AP)—Vince Dundee's bid for a chance in the world's middleweight championship has failed in the light of official decision.

The Newark star belted out what looked to ringside experts to be a decisive victory over Ben Jeby in a 10-round bout in Madison Square Garden last night, but got no better than a draw when the official verdict was read.

Jeby, defending the title for the first time since he received New York recognition, was on the receiving end most of the way.

Browning's Scissors Nips M'Coy Title Bid

By JACK CONWAY

Jim Browning, recognized as world's heavyweight wrestling champion in New York State, won from Bibber McCoy with his famous turnover body scissors hold in 1 hour, 5 minutes and 55 seconds before 7000 persons at a Paul Bowser show at the Boston Garden.

McCoy surprised even his most ardent admirers by the serious opposition he gave the rugged Browning.

McCOY FIT

McCoy was in exceptionally good condition. Bibber's flying tackles repeatedly drove the New York champion back.

Browning, as usual, made his big play with his body scissors. At the 20m. mark it looked for an instant as if Jim had Bibber pinned. But the latter rolled out of the hold.

Just before the hour mark Browning fastened on his body scissors. As McCoy hit the canvas, he turned over on his stomach before Jim could pin him.

Back on his feet Bibber rushed Browning and forced him through the ropes. Browning rocked McCoy with two furious heel locks.

McCoy broke away from another turnover scissors hold, but succumbed to another series of this hold. After being pinned several times Bibber was pinned. Time, 1h. 5m. 55s.

KIRSCHMEYER CAPABLE

Panther Joe Malcewicz of Utica and Rollie Kirschmeyer of Kansas went 30 m. to a stirring draw. Kirschmeyer is improving with each match and looks as if he is going places.

Man Mountain Dean of Georgia, with his sunkers freshly tailored, used John Spellman of Providence rather rough. The Man Mountain wrecked Spellman in 2m 48s. with an inside crotch hold, body lift and slam.

Spellman made about as much progress busting his noble head against Dean's huge body as he would have if he had been trying to level Mount Washington.

KAZANJIAN VICTOR

Casey Kazanjian of Stamford University used a giant swing to dispose of Jim Heslin of Canada in 6m 36s. Before coming with his winning toss, Kazanjian used several top body scissors holds. He backed the necessary power in his legs to pin his opponent with this hold.

Jose Dimingues of Spain and Leo Arpino of Italy went five minutes to a draw in the opening bout.

Hank Barber, of Dartmouth, and Buck Weaver, of Chicago, also ended up with honors even after five minutes of torrid grappling.

Bob Newport, of Newport, and Pete Tingue, of Kentucky, furnished plenty of fireworks in their five-minute draw.

Marino Kirilenko of Russia defeated George Saunders of Chicago in 6m 55s with a top body scissors. Leo Numa won from the Blue "Masked Marvel" in 4m. 30s. Referee Ralph Dixon disqualified the Marvel for illegal wrestling. He persisted in getting Numa tangled Coin Boom On!

Jack Conway's famous magic coin clicked again when Jim Browning won from Bibber McCoy in their bout at the Boston Garden. The coin's 1933 record:

is the ropes in a way that threatened to strangle him.

Pat Farley of Canada and Joe Minuel of Portugal tossed punches and exchanged kicks in a tussle that ended in a draw after 10 minutes of warfare.

BRUINS TO FACE OWEN, LANE

The All-Star college team which meets the Bruins on Wednesday night next at the Boston Garden in the feature match of the ice carnival for the Boston Unemployed Relief Fund will have George Owen of the Bruins and Myles Lane of the Cubs on its defense.

The All-Star team is rapidly taking form. Yale is expected to place Capt. Allie Fletcher, right winger; Capt.-elect Joe Gilligan, center, and Warren Colby, left winger, as members of the All Star college team.

Another forward line will be made up of Ian Baldwin and John Putnam of Harvard, and Capt. Arthur Lane of Princeton.

The first runs of the Boston Interscholastic League star team, composed of George Ford and Leo Ecker of Belmont and Joe Spaldoro of Melrose has been working with the college players and may play against the Bruins. The three school stars also will play as members of the Greater Boston All Star team in the game with the Bay State League All Star team.

All receipts will go directly to the Unemployment Relief Fund.

Ice Carnival Aiding Charity

All proceeds of the ice carnival to be held at Boston Garden next Wednesday will be turned over to the Boston emergency relief campaign for 25,000,000, Robert F. Herrick, general chairman of the drive announced today.

Chairman Herrick said that everything in connection with the operation of the carnival had been donated. All expenses, including details such as heating and lighting will be donated by the Garden management. The same procedure regarding expenses holds true in all sporting events arranged for the benefit of the drive, Chairman Herrick said.

Two sporting events have been staged thus far for the benefit of the relief drive. They were the polo game between the Canadian and the Harvard polo team and the skeet shoot at Ob Bow Shooting Club, Saxonville, last Sunday. In each case all receipts were donated to the relief fund.

Americans Help Oxford, Cambridge

London, March 18 (AP)—In the annual Oxford-Cambridge track meet the clash of the Blues will have a distinctly American college color tinge.

Cambridge has Oscar Sutermeister, a pole vault champion at Harvard, John Hawes, Harvard, sprinter, and R. B. Greenough, who put the shot for Bowdoin.

Oxford has an even wider range of American talent, including the former Harvard miler, Norwood Penrose Hallowell.

Up Ladder With Boss of Hose

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Chapter XII

After facing the combined deliveries of Overall, Reulbach and Brown in the World Series of 1910, Eddie Collins found himself next October in the batter's box looking over the fadeaway of the great Mathewson and the blinding speed of Rube Marquard of the Giants.

There never was a greater right hander than Christy Mathewson. John McGraw says Matty was the greatest pitcher that ever was born. Eddie Collins himself thinks Walter Johnson and Rube Waddell had the edge on Big Six.

Perhaps Collins places Matty behind Johnson and Waddell because of Eddie's success against Big Six in the World's Series of 1911. It was Eddie's big bat that launched the eleventh inning rally of the Athletics in the third game of the series and sent the mighty Matty crashing down to his first World's Series defeat.

The teams were deadlocked, 2 to 2, going into the eleventh inning that memorable afternoon. Both Matty and Coombs had been pitching wonderful ball. Collins had singled and stolen with two down in the fourth inning, but was left when Matty himself made a great stop and threw out of Home Run Baker.

THE WINNING RUN

Eddie had better luck in the 11th. Again he found the great Matty for a clean single. Eddie raced all the way to third when Merkle played Baker's slow bounder badly. Matty's infield was crumbling behind him. Fletcher erred on Murphy's grounder and Collins raced home with the winning run.

Although Collins was one of the Athletics' heroes of the 1911 series he did not shine as consistently brilliant as he did in the 1910 series against the Cubs. Eddie made one spectacular stop of a terrific smash by Larry Doyle in the second game in New York that set the stands in a frenzy, but on the whole he was a bit shaky in the field and did not maintain the standard he had flashed the previous year.

Matty held Collins hitless in the first game. The second game saw Eddie rise to the occasion. He found the speed of the great Marquard to his liking and nicked the Giant for three hits including a double. In the field Eddie took care of six chances faultlessly.

SHINES IN FIELD

Collins singled in the first inning of that second game but was left when Marquard fanned Baker on a third strike. Eddie made a superb stop and throw on Merkle in the fourth. With 2 down in the fifth Eddie doubled and scored on a astraddle of Baker's homer. Eddie made a pair of brilliant stops in the eighth and tossed out Red Murray for the final out in the ninth.

What happened in the fifth game already has been told. Eddie singled to left off Matty in the second inning of the fourth game, but was left when Baker fanned. Eddie singled and scored on Baker's double in the fifth inning. In the seventh Collins sacrificed Lord to third.

Collins failed to get a hit off Mraquard, Ames and CCrandall in the fifth game, but in the sixth and final game figured again in the scoring, although failing to break into the hit column. On the squeeze play in the seventh inning Eddie sacrificed Lord across the plate and was safe himself when Merkle dropped Wiltse's throw. Eddie came the rest of the way on hits by Baker and Murphy.

LAKE TO STICK WITH BRAVES HILL STAFF

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 18—Bernie Lake, 20-year-old schoolboy pitching ace of the Braves, the brightest prospect of the flock of rookie hurlers working with the Tribe here, looks to be the greatest find in years.

The young Florida sensation started Manager Bill McKechnie when he allowed only one hit and struck out four batters against Philadelphia.

In spite of the fact that Lake lacks the necessary major league experience, he handled himself like a veteran, working in the box for five innings against the slugging Phillies.

LAKE TO STAY UP

Lake will be the only rookie to remain with the Braves during the league season, Manager McKechnie is almost certain that young Lake will add plenty of strength to the weak Tribal pitching staff as a finishing flinger.

The Tribal manager hopes that the protege of Ben Cantwell will gain enough experience in a year with third strike corridor, to stay up in the major league.

Although the Braves dropped their third straight exhibition game to the Phillies, 5 to 1, the pitching of Lake was outstanding.

HOGAN IMPROVES

The exhibition games are doing the Warriors plenty of good. Frank "Shanty" Hogan, huge Somerville catcher, has finally found his batting eye. Big Frank scored the only run in the sixth inning against the Phils this afternoon after Tribe from being shut out.

With three defeats marked in the spring training book, Manager McKechnie isn't downhearted with his club in the least. The boss of the Tribe says his club is getting plenty of practice and will start winning ball games when the major league season starts April 12.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

After losing to the Eagles, mainly through the spectacular goal tending of "Moe" Roberts, the Bruin Cubs expect to swing back into the winning stride tonight when they tackle the Rhode Island Reds at the Garden.

Since Pres. James E. Dooley's warning, the Canadian-American League players have tamed down. They were well on their way to gain notoriety for their rough actions and Dooley is to be congratulated upon his stand.

Stewart Below Par

With Eddie Shore suffering from the effects of crashing into the goal post in Montreal, and Nels Stewart still below par due to his recent fever, the Bruins are in Montreal very possibly meeting their battle with Les Canadiens tonight in the Forum.

The Toronto Maple Leafs have encountered more than the average number of serious injuries this season. Charlie Conacher was hurt, and was out for more than a month. Then Andy Blair was out and was on the side lines for weeks. Now Ace Bailey is out of the play—off with a broken shoulder.

Close students of hockey are still trying to figure out what the Rangers are doing down in third place. Some of the skeptics have come to the conclusion that Lester Patrick out-smarted himself. But, watch his Rangers in the playoffs.

Apparently Pres. Frank Calder is giving the Stewart-Gorman controversy plenty of consideration and deep thought. Many fans will still bet that the verdict will be rendered in such a way as not to offend the big shots.

Tardy Ban Likely

Probably Calder will announce that Gorman and Coulter have been suspended after the Hawks wind up their season next Thursday in Toronto.

With first place practically at stake, the Bruins will claw at the Flying Frenchmen with all paws tonight in the Forum. The Rossmen realize the importance of victory and the Canadiens are in for some heavy going, which many of them cannot take.

'MATTER' WILL BE SUBJECT

"Matter" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, March 19.

The Golden Text is: "O Lord our God, other lords beside thee have had dominion over us; but by thee only will we make mention of thy name" (Isaiah 26:13).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "If sickness is true or the idea of Truth, you cannot destroy sickness and it would be absurd to try. Then classify sickness and error as our Master did, when he spoke of the sick, 'whom Satan hath bound,' and find a sovereign antidote for error in the life-giving power of Truth acting on human belief, a power which opens the prison doors to such as are bound, and sets the captive free physically and morally" (p. 400).

Old Fashions Revived at Dudley St. Baptist

Wining About Spilt Milk

—By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER—

The California grape growers and the U. S. Senate can't seem to get together on the idea of wine.

The Senate says 3.05 is wine. But that ain't the stuff that is a mocker.

California claims there is more than that right now in sarsaparilla and Grade A milk.

We're neither a Senator nor a Californian but we know that 3.05 is not a glorious western sunset. It ain't even a warm spring breeze.

They can't pour that new wine into us old skins. Our only hope is that the Senate has taken up the children's problems first and will get to us oldtimers later.

IT MUST BE SPRING

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

Thursday morning early people began to drop in on the veteran east side barber, Joe Jones, asking What's this, Joe, about the barber war in Lamar. After several had sprung this on ole Joe, he hopped on his bicycle and circled the square. Sure enough, there in the north side window it said, Shaves 20c—Hair cuts 20c. Art Sisle's shop window gave the same sign and the West Side shop had a similar sign up in their window. Joe completed his ride around the square, and arriving back at his shop exclaimed, Yep, you're right the war's on!

"I have read 35,000 hands . . . I see approaching normal times. In the palms of the generation just coming up are many encouraging signs."

Some of us, however, will be pessimistic until the lady reports that she has found a dime in the palm of somebody's hand.

In face of widespread doubt that the League of Nations, in its first big test, will fail to forestall war between China and Japan, Congressman Horace Frisby makes a timely proposal. Let him speak for himself—

"My idea," says Frisby, "is simple. Everybody knows that the pen is mightier than the sword. Any copy book will teach you that. I therefore propose to bring the Japanese and Chinese together in a conference, and make a proposition that they equip their armies with fountain pens. Let them write notes to each other. And then arrange to have the World Court step in and arrest both sides for sending naughty letters through the mail."

New Canadian Law Affects Air Promotion on Programs Originating in U. S.

By N. F. T.

Two weeks from today finds a new radio ruling in effect there over the Canadian border. Price mention will be prohibited, as will any more than five per cent of purchased program time for selling talk. Since there are five major stations in Montreal, Toronto and Windsor, each and all affiliated with NBC and CBS chain networks of the United States, something of a situation automatically develops.

An official decree by the Canadian Radio Commission as stated, causes the American microphone moguls considerable concern, particularly in view of the fact that it may actually mean discontinuance of certain major entertainment effort along the neighboring Dominion air lanes. At this writing, it doesn't appear as though ways or means had been suggested to overcome the imposed restriction.

* * *

Stations linked with the Columbia System in Canada are CKAC of Montreal, CFRB of Toronto and CKOK of Windsor. National Broadcasting Co. outlets over the boundary line are CFCF of Montreal, and CKGW of Toronto. It is further reported unlikely that Canadian broadcasting officials will deviate from the legislated law or permit any special concessions whatsoever to sponsored programs shaped and staged here in the States.

OZONE OBSERVATIONS

No more of the "Country Doctor" doings (WEZ) at 8:45, although coming April 4, Poet Gillilan (CKOK) returns to regular radio duty in that clock spot. The comeback will be as a rural "Barber" character, with numerous attending voices included, all parts played by Phil, as per his specialty of old....Last night concluded the "March of Time" series for a while ...Orchestra bosses digging like the very dickens lately for old beer songs....Lou Gehrig sounds strikingly like Al Jolson, notice?....
